

LEX ECCLESIASTICA

Adepta Sororitas roleplaying in the 41st Millennium
Written by Hipólita

Table of Contents

Introduction	6
---------------------	---

Rules	11
--------------	----

Resistances	11
-------------	----

Core Loop	14
-----------	----

Stress and Fallout	17
--------------------	----

Skills	24
--------	----

Domains	26
---------	----

Character Growth	30
------------------	----

Fallout	37
---------	----

Resources	56
-----------	----

Bonds	58
-------	----

Havens	61
--------	----

Classes	63
----------------	----

Canoness in Training	63
----------------------	----

Hospitaller	68
-------------	----

Repentia	73
----------	----

Reliquant at Arms	80
-------------------	----

Dialogous	85
-----------	----

Dominion	91
----------	----

Orders	97
---------------	----

Our Martyred Lady	98
-------------------	----

Ebon Chalice	100
--------------	-----

Bloody Rose	102
-------------	-----

Valorous Heart	104
----------------	-----

Sacred Rose	106
-------------	-----

Campaign Structure	108
---------------------------	-----

Operations	113
-------------------	-----

Equipment	123
------------------	-----

Running the Game	128
-------------------------	-----

Oracle Tables	140
---------------	-----

Appendix	154
-----------------	-----

Introduction

WHAT AM I READING?

This is a tabletop roleplaying game about the Adepta Sororitas - or more accurately, about the Orders Militant of the Adepta Sororitas, perhaps better known as the Battle Sisters. This game tells stories about the Sisters, who they are and who they want to be, and who they might become. It's about duty and dogma and temptation, about authority and power, but also about human beings saddled with impossible expectations, all while getting powerscaled to shit one-on-one by most things you can see on the front of a Warhammer box.

WHAT IS THE SETTING?

The game takes place across the war-torn Imperial frontier, past the Cicatrix Maledictum: shrines, manufactoria, hive-slums, dust moons, orbital reliquaries, and pilgrim routes where the Imperium's authority is sacred but unevenly enforced, even tenuous. The Adepta Sororitas arrive as instruments of purification, but every deployment reveals political compromise, spiritual decay, or civilian suffering that doctrine refuses to name. We play fast and loose with 40K lore here, because Games Workshop does the same thing. The lore is intentionally vague, expansive and even self-contradictory - the reason there are literally billions of worlds is that we can tell any story we want within certain very lenient constraints.

tone and Themes

We want campaigns to emphasize stuff like:

Contradictions of Imperial dogma, such as holy decrees that fail humans on the ground, and the real human price of strict dogmatic adherence to belief.

The seductive efficiency of heretical solutions (warp insight, forbidden xeno tech, apostate alliances, anything resembling “the concept of next week”).

The emotional strain of perpetual sacrifice (exhaustion, martyrdom, pride, doubt, physical pain, desolation, loneliness, crises of faith).

In this game faith is real and powerful, but it is not as straightforward and uncomplicated as Sisters believe. Heresy is potent and sometimes possible to empathize with, but it is also corrosive to the soul.

WHO ARE THE PLAYER CHARACTERS?

Players take the roles of Battle Sisters deployed as a strike cell and investigative team. They are:

- Highly trained, deeply faithful militant warriors, shaped by monastic discipline.
- Mortal humans under impossible burdens, still capable of doubt, anger, compassion, pride, or ambition.
- Agents of the Ecclesiarchy, but with viewpoints colored by their pasts, their Order's doctrines, and the horrors they witness.
- Invested with the raiments of Imperial authority, but otherwise having little personal freedom of their own.

Each Sister has:

A class, determining what she does and who she's expected to be. Her class also determines her starting equipment and her Core Abilities. Any additional abilities (listed as Minor and Major abilities) will be gained through Advancement.

An Order she belongs to or is somehow attached to.

WHAT KIND OF GAME IS THIS?

I loathe the term but I'll say it: this is a story game. I use this term in opposition to a trad game, the kind where you count ammo, read through equipment cost tables and have things like "chance to hit" and damage rolls. If that's the kind of game you want, the Blood of Martyrs book for the Dark Heresy roleplaying game has got you covered. I think it's a fantastic game, but that game already exists so I'm writing a game that doesn't. A game where, yes, we roll dice to fill demons full of bolter ammo and generally do Cool Sister Shit, but cares more about the characters themselves and who they are rather than what they do.

Mechanically, this uses the Resistance Toolbox, which you might know from games like Spire: The City Must Fall and Heart: The City Beneath. It's very much a story game, but one that, I think, feels familiar if you're used to dungeon delving games. You also roll a ton of dice compared to other games in the category. In this game, you advance your character not by killing things but by fulfilling certain story beats related to the various internal forces pulling at a Sister's heart.

The game assumes competency from the player characters — they can mostly achieve whatever they set their mind to, but anything short of resounding success in their rolls means there will be unforeseen consequences and costs to pay, in the form of their Resistances, which you can think of as separate “health” tracks for various categories of ailments and setbacks these characters might experience. This game also acknowledges and celebrates how powerful the Sisters of Battle are: at the very least, the average sister is armed with some kind of bolt or flamer weapon plus a suit of power armor enhancing her durability and strength. Common Hive World criminals with scrappy lasguns do not stand a fighting chance against a Sister of Battle unless they very, very severely outnumber her.

Rules

RESISTANCES

Resistances represent what is at stake for the characters, what aspects of themselves they are wagering on the altar of chance. As a narrative or mechanical consequence, you can take stress (fixed or randomized via dice roll) to any of your five Resistances, which might ossify into discrete negative situations called Fallouts, which we’ll get to later. Your class, equipment and abilities might provide you with protections that reduce the amount of stress you would take to your Resistances. The resistances are:

Body

Wounds, exhaustion, radiation, disease, starvation, and the toll of constant war.

This covers any harm done to the physical form: laser burns, broken bones, ruptured lungs from bad void seals, the attrition of long marches or cramped hab-life. BODY fallout is immediate and visceral: injuries, infections, impaired movement, damaged gear fused to flesh, and the creeping weakness of overexertion. Body fallout can also be ongoing - nagging injuries, permanent damage, malnutrition, poison.

Faith

Doubt, spiritual dissonance, shaken convictions, the cracks in what you believe the Imperium should be.

This resistance represents internal crisis: beleaguered hope, loss of certainty, temptation by alternative doctrines, guilt, despair, or the quiet realization that the official truth does not match lived experience. Faith fallout takes the form of crises of conscience, faltering resolve, compulsive rituals, paranoia, compensatory outbursts of zeal, or the deepening fear that the Emperor is not listening.

Authority

Insubordination, bureaucratic entanglement, political missteps, and the attention of powerful institutions.

This tracks your standing within the formal structures of power, Imperial or otherwise: officers, priests, scribes, enforcers, inquisitors, cult leaders, planetary governors. Stress is marked when you defy orders, improvise in the wrong moment, attract scrutiny, or fail to navigate the labyrinthine expectations of hierarchy. Authority fallout manifests as reprimands, surveillance, demotions, revoked permissions, equipment requisitions, mandated oaths, or official interest.

Fortune

Misfortune, improbability, and the relentless unpredictability of the universe.

This represents events that conspire against the characters despite their skill and preparation: malfunctioning weapons, collapsing terrain, hostile weather, or sudden twists of fate that disrupt even the best-laid plans. Fortune fallout can be immediate, such as a jammed revolver at a critical moment, a trap springing, or an ally caught out by circumstances; or it can be ongoing: lost supplies, compromised connections, damaged relics, or the ripple effects of an earlier accident. Fortune represents the universe itself testing the Sisters: adversity that cannot be foreseen or fully mitigated, only endured, adapted to, or survived.

Corruption

Warp-taint, psychic backlash, spiritual pollution, daemonic attention, and metaphysical harm.

The price of touching the Immaterium (through sorcery, heretical relics, psychic overstretch, possession attempts, or even by being near the source of these things). Corruption fallout includes nightmares, mutations, compulsions, sensory distortions, or the hungry gaze of entities from beyond.

CORE GAMEPLAY LOOP

The game moves like a conversation. The GM (you can call them The Prioress if you like) will establish the initial situation and stakes - almost always in the form of the Sisters being put together in a dropship and dropped on the surface of a planet to investigate and eliminate something heretical - and the players will describe what their characters say, do and think. This goes back and forth until there's a need to roll dice. There's a lot of dice to toss in this game. Klick klack.

Taxonomically, you can think of a Campaign of Lex Ecclesiastica as a series of Missions (overarching final goals, their reason for being on this particular planet), which are composed of multiple Operations (manageable, discrete goals that advance the Mission), and each Operation will be made up of multiple Situations (key scenes the Sisters must resolve or flee). A lot of mechanics and abilities will work on a per-situation, per-operation or per-mission basis so they're an important pacing mechanism.

When a Sister attempts something dangerous, uncertain, or opposed by the world, you make a roll, mostly using ten-sided die. This game does not use turns, enemy actions, or opposed rolls. The world pushes back through consequences when Sisters fail or overextend themselves.

When you absolutely need the world to hurt the Sisters or test their strength and resolve, have them roll Stand to endure whatever is coming their way, but they only take half stress from this.

Dice Rolling Procedure

When the GM or the rules declare a need to roll, they'll specify the roll's most relevant Skill and Domain, as well as its Danger level (Safe, Risky or Dangerous). Then, build your dice pool, made up of:

- One die, always available, due to sheer competence and strength of will.
- One additional die, if you have the relevant skill.
- One additional die, if you have the relevant domain.
- One additional die if a character with a relevant skill or domain you're missing is aiding you. However, the aiding character takes stress along with you if you accept their help.
- Any bonus dice granted by abilities, equipment, or fiction, as well as any Mastery dice.

Roll all dice together and look for the highest-value face. If the roll was Risky, remove the highest-value die from the pool of rolled dice. If the roll was Dangerous, remove the two highest-value dice instead.

Then, consult the following chart:

- 1: Critical Failure (take double stress)
- 2-5: Failure (take stress)
- 6-7: Success at a cost (take stress)
- 8-9: Success (take no stress)
- 10: Critical success (inflict double stress)

Difficulty represents how hostile, unstable, or overwhelming the situation is — not how “skilled” an enemy might be. Difficulty is set by the established fiction. It does not stack, and it is not negotiated tactically — if the world is dangerous, the roll reflects that.

Only roll when there’s something at stake, represented by the possibility of accruing stress to one of the Sisters’ Resistances. The Sisters are extremely well trained, well equipped and have their own faith as a bulwark against all threats.

Unlike more traditional games, enemies never roll against the Sisters. They do not get turns and do not perform actions or attacks on their own. Their strength is represented by the difficulty of rolling against them and the size of their Stress die. Their actions happen when a Sister acts against them and rolls 7 or lower. It’s better to think of combat as simply another vector for rolling. It is not a separate subsystem within the game. If Sisters want to stop something from happening, they must act — quickly, decisively, and often at great personal cost.

STRESS AND FALLOUT

Stress represents what the Sisters risk when they act: injury, doubt, scrutiny, bad luck, or corruption. It is not damage in the traditional sense—the characters don’t have an HP track at all—and it does not disappear just because a fight is over.

When a roll results in Failure, Success at a Cost, or Critical Failure, the GM assigns stress to one of the Sister’s Resistances:

- Body
- Faith
- Authority
- Fortune
- Corruption

The Resistance chosen should, most of the time, follow directly from the fiction. A Sister who is shot marks Body stress. A Sister who hesitates, doubts, or witnesses blasphemy marks Faith stress. A Sister who defies orders or draws attention from the wrong people marks Authority stress.

The GM assigns a stress die size (usually D₃–D₁₀) based on the threat, environment, and enemy involved, then rolls it and adds the result to the corresponding Stress track.

Fallout

Each Resistance has a stress track. Each time you take stress, the GM rolls a D₁₀ to see if you suffer fallout; a mechanical and/or narrative consequence, examples of which are outlined in the Fallout chapter. If the D₁₀ rolls lower than your current total stress for that particular Resistance, you suffer fallout.

- If your current Stress is 5 or lower, you suffer Minor Fallout, which represents short-term harm, complications, or narrative pressure.
- If your current Stress is higher than 5, you suffer Major Fallout which represents serious injury, lasting consequences, or decisive shifts in the story.

Fallout is not optional. When it triggers, it happens immediately and must be resolved in the fiction. Some fallout is Immediate, taking effect as soon as the description is read or determined. Ongoing fallout lingers with a character and hounds them until dealt with. At the player's and/or GM's discretion, two Minor fallouts can be combined into a single Major fallout (this is especially convenient if they're fallouts of the same Resistance, or if the Sister has taken too many fallouts to easily keep track of. GM: be sparing with ongoing fallout). Likewise, two Major fallouts can be combined into a single Critical fallout, and this is the only way to receive Critical fallout.

Critical fallout should only be obtained with the player's consent, as it usually signals the end of this character, through death, desertion, daemonic possession or worse.

Healing Stress

Stress is usually not cleared automatically, and Sisters must carry it forward. This is a game about attrition, pressure, and faith under fire. The various ways to reduce Stress are:

- Performing your Class or Order's Refresh action
- Laying low for a while, in prayer or rest. This will usually let the enemy make moves unimpeded or gain the Sisters a Bane for the current or next Operation to represent time lost. This is a D₄ Refresh.
- Gaining a Fallout. When gaining a Minor fallout, clear all stress in the corresponding track. When gaining Major fallout, clear all stress from an additional track of your choice as well.

Important Notes

Stress is applied after the roll resolves.

Enemies do not inflict stress directly.

Fallout is the primary way the game escalates, and Major fallout often provides a completely new threat or emergency to deal with.

Success does not mean safety — it just means you get what you wanted.

Example of play

Hipólita is running this game for Shuwen and Lucía. Shuwen plays Decima, a Sister Hospitaller, while Lucía plays Sabine, a Dominion.

The Sisters are moving through the collapsed nave of a shrine. Candlelight flutters in skull-lined alcoves. Whispered prayers echo though no mouths move. The GM describes a warp resonance bleeding through a cracked reliquary wall. It isn't attacking—yet—but it's poisoning the area.

GM: "If this keeps building, the whole chapel will destabilize. You can feel it pulling at your thoughts."

Decima wants to perform an emergency rite, stabilising the relic long enough for the squad to move on.

The GM calls for a roll:

- Skill: Bind
- Domain: Reliquary
- Difficulty: Risky (the warp pressure is intense)

This is great for Decima, who has both the Bind skill and the Reliquary domain. Shuwen builds his pool:

- One base die
- One Skill die
- One Domain die

He rolls all three dice and rolls 10, 6 and 6. And after removing the highest die for Risky difficulty, his highest remaining result is a 6. Success at a Cost. Decima completes the rite. The whispers recede. The reliquary stops pulsing, but the warp pushes back.

GM: "You hold the prayer together, but it hurts. The words don't want to stay still, and your tongue catches when the scripture leaving your lips does not match the words you know."

Decima has succeeded but the danger remains elsewhere, and now Stress must be rolled.

The GM assigns D6 Corruption stress and rolls a 3. Decima marks 3 Corruption stress, and the GM rolls a D10 to check for Fallout. She rolls an 8, too high to trigger Fallout against Decima's meager 3 Stress. The scene continues:

GM: "A bone-door slams open. A Choir Initiate staggers into view, chanting scripture backwards, swinging a cracked maul."

Lucía declares Sabine steps forward and fires with her bolt pistol, trying to drop the cultist before it can complete its ritual.

The GM calls for a roll:

- Skill: Break
- Domain: Heresy (might be Reliquary as they're in a Shrine, but choosing Heresy here indicates evil is taking root faster than anyone had expected)
- Difficulty: Risky (the enemy isn't particularly tough, but the consequences for failure are dire)

Lucía builds her pool:

- One base die
- One Skill die
- One Domain die

She rolls. After removing the highest die, her highest remaining result is a 3. Failure. Sabine's shot goes wide. The bolt detonates against a reliquary pillar, showering the area with bone-shrapnel and incense fire. The cultist strikes back, because that's what is represented by gaining Stress in this situation.

GM: "You hesitate for half a second and that's enough. The cultist lunges toward you with otherworldly speed, maul swinging."

The GM assigns D6 Body stress and rolls a 5. After Lucía marks the Stress to her character, the GM rolls for fallout and rolls a 4. As it's under Sabine's stress of 5, Sabine gains a Minor Body fallout. The GM and Lucía agree on the fiction: Sabine has suffered a concussive shock from the maul hitting her head. She can still fight — but she's hurt and dazed, and it shows.

Lucía clears all Stress from Sabine's Body track. The cultist is still alive. Combat continues. The situation has escalated.

SKILLS

The way Sisters interact with the world is mediated by Skills, broad areas of expertise they are expected to be competent in. There are no granular skill-point assignments here, but a binary question: you either have it or you don't. Not having a skill doesn't make a Sister incapable of performing an associated action. It just means she hasn't specialized in it.

BIND

Connection, persuasion, negotiation, comfort, intimidation, deception.

Any time you try to change a mind or a relationship.

BREAK

Violence, sabotage, forcing through obstacles, shattering magical or social structures.

Any time you impose your will through force or destruction.

SENSE

Perception, intuition, insight, reading intent, seeking the truth, attuning to the strange.

Any time you try to understand what's happening.

MOVE

Travel, climbing, dodging, stealth, pursuit, escape, positioning.

Any time the body needs to get somewhere safely or quickly.

SHAPE

Crafting, repairing, ritual, creation, transformation, problem-solving through making.

Any time you alter the world's form, mend something broken or prepare something.

STAND

Protection, resistance (physical or social), holding the line, endurance, defying coercion.

Any time you refuse to yield.

DOMAINS

While Skills apply specifically to actions, domains are much broader and represent general familiarity related to a given kind of area or person. Domains represent not just academic knowledge of an institution or place, but the experience that comes from having navigated it thoroughly. The main reasons to add a Dominion dice to your roll are when

- The action somehow relates to the Domain's area of expertise (as exemplified in each Domain's Use this when... prompt below)
- The Sister is physically standing in an area of a Domain she has access to.

IMPERIUM

The vast, creaking machinery of the God-Emperor's domain: Administratum archives, Ecclesiarchal courts, Scholae, noble spires, manufactoria, and the countless officials who keep them barely functioning. Anyone versed in this Domain understands hierarchy, ritualized obedience, sanctioned violence, and the cadence of bureaucracy. It's the terrain of obedience, dogma, and the weight of a million regulations.

Use this when: navigating institutional power, deciphering

Imperial procedure, commanding authority, interrogating officials, identifying sanctioned or proscribed actions, or leveraging your rank to cut through red tape.

WARZONE

Cities under bombardment, trenches carved into ash plains, hive blocks turned kill-boxes, or ship corridors choked with smoke. This Domain represents not just combat skill but lived familiarity with logistics, morale, and the awful pragmatism of survival under fire. Characters with it move through battlefields like locals.

Use this when: advancing under fire, exploiting cover, navigating collapsing warzones, coordinating squad tactics, reading battlefield movement, or turning chaos into tactical advantage.

RELIQUARY

Ancient vaults, forbidden archives, ossuaries, long-dead saints, ship-catacombs, and anywhere belief and faith in the Emperor himself burns hotter than respect for His institutions. This is the Domain of knowing how to handle relics, interpret history distorted by myth, and survive structures never meant for human eyes. It grants comfort among the sacred, the archaic, and the deeply dangerous.

Use this when: identifying relics, parsing forgotten lore, navigating sacred or profaned spaces, enduring supernatural dread by faith alone, or dealing with artifacts not meant for mortal hands.

FRONTIER

Void stations clinging to life, mining towns on dead moons, agri-habs, pilgrim convoys, underhive warrens, and all the places where the Imperium's grasp is at its most tenuous. Those with this Domain know how ordinary people survive - through barter, grit, rumor networks, and stubborn hope. It is the terrain of improvisation, resourcefulness, and the fragile bonds that hold communities together.

Use this when: tracking through wastelands, negotiating with desperate settlements, surviving harsh environments, navigating tunnels or underhives, or sensing the undercurrents of frontier justice and rumor.

TECH

Forge-temples echoing with monotone prayer, manufactoria belching incense and smoke, data-crypts thrumming with cogitator hum, servitor bays, sanctified engines, and the countless machine-shrines that keep Imperial life from collapsing outright. This Domain belongs to those who speak the language of machinery, whether reverent, intuitive, or violently pragmatic.

Use this when: diagnosing machinery, bypassing arcane security, spotting mechanical flaws or traps, repairing gear under duress, parsing augur or auspex readings, or navigating industrial labyrinths.

HERESY

Heretek forges, cult warrens, xenos lairs, whispered rites, possessed artifacts, and every place where devotion is misshapen. This Domain represents familiarity with the social and emotional ecosystems of corruption. Characters with it recognize the signs, the symbols, the cadence of forbidden liturgies, and the pull of power that condemns. They might even intuitively understand how to harness such forces.

Use this when: detecting corruption, confronting daemons or psykers, reading cult behavior, dealing with xenos, interrupting rituals, resisting temptation, or working through the logic of the profane to dismantle it... or harness it.

CHARACTER GROWTH

The Sisters grow by performing specific acts within the established fiction of the game, mechanized as Beats. Players should make their chosen Beats known, and actively and explicitly seek out opportunities to fulfill them. It is also one of the GM's (as well as other players') duties to steer the fiction and the story towards golden opportunities to fulfill Beats.

At the start of each session, each player chooses:

- 1 Dogma Beat (Duty / Vows / Faith)
- 1 Humanity Beat (Compassion / Identity / Community)
- 1 Shadow Beat (Temptation / Expedience / Heresy)

Players can pick any combination of Minor or Major Beats available to them.

They may change Beats freely at the start of each session; uncompleted Beats simply return to the pool.

Completing a Beat immediately grants:

- a Minor Ability or Requisition if it was a Minor Beat
- a Major Ability or Requisition if it was a Major Beat

This ensures every session has a thematic arc, advancement is tied directly to the choice to engage with all three sides of this moral triangle, and players decide their Sister's particular balance. You can only choose a Beat a single time. Cross it off once you've achieved it.

Dogma Beats

Minor

Loudly profess unflinching faith in a dangerous or tense situation.

Destroy something before examining it and gain d4 Corruption Stress.

Put yourself in danger to protect a fellow Sister.

Threaten a civilian or subordinate into obedience.

Quote scripture as justification for a risky or violent action.

Demand supplies from a struggling community

Publicly call out heresy at an inconvenient time.

Burn an object others wanted to examine or preserve.

Insist on a ritual or rite even if it delays the Mission.

Refuse healing or aid, saying the Emperor provides.

Break a Bond for reasons of purity.

Strip someone of speech by force or command.

Destroy a corpse or relic to prevent future corruption.

Punish yourself for a failure no one else noticed.
Cause a Bond to take minor fallout.
Lead others in prayer when they wanted action.
Refuse to compromise even when it's strategically useful.
Invoke Imperial Law over local custom.
Take Major Body fallout.
Treat hesitation as sin and suppress it.

Major

Lead a purge, taking command by your own authority.
Let a Haven be destroyed as a distraction.
Destroy a powerful object instead of studying it.
Refuse retreat or repositioning in the face of danger.
Publicly condemn an Imperial official
Enforce orthodoxy even though it meaningfully harms the Mission.
Impose harsh penance on a Sister you care about.
Refuse to speak to a captured enemy, denying them any humanity.
Reduce a complicated moral situation to doctrine.
Cause a Bond to take Major fallout.

Humanity Beats

Minor

Protect a vulnerable NPC by delaying the Mission.
Show compassion when wrath would have been simpler.
Reveal a personal truth to someone outside your squad.
Deescalate a situation that your Sisters were ready to escalate.
Defend a Haven from attack.
Offer comfort where doctrine demands only sternness.
Intervene to stop cruelty from an Imperial authority.
Help someone hide or escape punishment.
Give away a needed Resource for another's survival.
Speak openly of doubt, fear, or longing.
Follow local custom instead of Sororitas protocol.
Accept help from someone the Imperium deems lesser.
Treat a heretic as a person with a history, not a threat.
Admit you were wrong in a moment that costs you status or respect.
Prioritize civilians' safety above tactical advantage.
Forgive someone who wronged the Mission.
Refuse to harm someone begging for mercy.

Use words where violence would be more efficient.

Help someone mourn, even though the Mission needs you elsewhere.

Take Major Faith fallout.

Major

Form a Bond that cannot directly help your Mission.

Defy callous or inhumane orders in public.

Spare a dangerous enemy who could return to haunt you.

Risk the Mission to save innocents, adding D8 to the current Operation's Resistance.

Reveal deep vulnerability to the entire squad.

Build trust with a community devastated by war.

Advocate for mercy in front of someone who outranks you.

Choose peace where everyone expects war.

Accept personal responsibility for a tragedy you could have avoided.

Abandon a critical objective to protect a single life.

Shadow Beats

Minor

Keep a forbidden artifact instead of destroying it.

Act in secret to pursue a personal desire.

Hide evidence of warp taint in yourself or someone else.

Use a heretical or questionable object to your benefit.

Lie to a Sister to protect your own goals.

Kill a human enemy attempting to surrender.

Manipulate a civilian into helping you.

Betray someone's trust for expedience.

Read a dangerous text and tell no one.

Form a private agenda separate from the Mission.

Exploit a vulnerable community or Bond for personal gain.

Accept aid or information from a heretical source.

Use excessive force when restraint was entirely possible.

Destroy something valuable out of anger or pride.

Sabotage an NPC or Sister who competes with you.

Conceal a mistake that would earn penance.

Let someone else take the blame for your failure.

Pursue power, prestige, or satisfaction at Mission cost.

Allow a dangerous secret to remain unreported.

Take minor Corruption fallout.

Major

Act on heretical knowledge or use warp-tainted resources to save the Mission or a Sister.

Form an alliance (explicit or tacit) with a heretic, xenos, mutant, or apostate.

Let a Haven be consumed by corruption.

Betray a trusted ally for strategic advantage.

Reject Imperial doctrine in a moment of crisis.

Collect Heresy resources mid-Operation, adding D6 to the Operation's Resistance.

Destroy evidence of corruption and justify it to yourself.

Take minor Faith fallout.

Enable a heretic or traitor to escape justice.

Sacrifice a Bond to advance a personal ambition.

FALLOUT

Feel free to make up new Fallouts as the fiction demands if none of the available ones make sense or resonate with you. Anything that taxes resources, makes Bonds less reliable, adds Stress or makes rolls more Dangerous is good.

BODY - Minor

“Minor” only by Sororitas standards. These are serious injuries, but a Sister can grit her teeth and keep fighting.

Broken Bones

A fracture from impact or recoil. The limb still works, but weakly and with grinding pain. Any action relying on the limb is Risky. [Ongoing]

Missing Eye

One eye is simply gone, fallen victim to the rigors of battle or the dangers of the Mission. Actions requiring eyesight and visual discernment upgrade their difficulty one step. [Ongoing]

Hemorrhaging Wound

A deep puncture or slash bleeds faster than you can staunch it. After every situation, mark D4 Body Stress. Can escalate. [Ongoing]

Gut Shot

A blow to the mid section so powerful you cannot help but double over and vomit. Every friendly character around you takes 1d4 Faith Stress.

Concussive Shock

A blow to the head rings your vision and scrambles balance. Perception-based actions become Risky. If you push yourself too hard, this escalates quickly. [Ongoing]

Burn Trauma (Lesser)

Ceramite armour fused to skin. Flame, plasma, or chem-burns searing exposed flesh. Actions involving fine movement or focus are Dangerous. Can worsen if exposed to heat or chemicals again. [Ongoing]

Dislocated Joint

A shoulder, knee, or wrist pops out of alignment. Painful, limiting, and partially immobilizing until treated. Related actions are Risky. [Ongoing]

BODY - Major

Blinded

Both eyes impaired or destroyed, overwhelmed by attack, flash, shrapnel, or psychic assault. Any action requiring sight is Dangerous or, most likely, impossible. Might be permanent. [Ongoing]

Crushed Limb

Bone and muscle pulped beneath debris, blows, or mechanical failure. The limb is functionally deadweight, if not gone altogether. Actions that rely on it automatically fail. [Ongoing]

Arterial Bleed

Blood pours in a pulsing rhythm impossible to fully stop. After each situation, mark D6 Body Stress. Without immediate intervention, you will drop. [Ongoing]

Collapsed Lung

Breathing becomes shallow and agonizing. Any strenuous action becomes Dangerous, and long exertion is impossible. You wheeze prayers through cracked ribs. [Ongoing]

Burn Trauma (Major)

Large portions of skin blister, char, or melt. Movement, handling gear, or focusing through pain are Dangerous. Even with medical aid, you may be scarred or disfigured. [Ongoing]

Critical Injury

A vital strike tears muscle, cripples tendons, or destroys an organ. Choose one Skill you have access to - you lose access to it entirely until healed at a Haven, if possible. [Ongoing]

BODY - Critical

Last Breath

You are dying. Choose to perform one final act with mastery, then die, or cling desperately to life, losing something vital as you do.

Broken Beyond Recognition

Your body collapses into a gory mess of incurable injuries. You have time for some final words before succumbing to your wounds. Those who find you treat the remains as a relic and the site of your death as holy ground.

Engined

Fanatics or Adeptus Mechanicus tech-priests save your broken body by grafting you into a penitent engine. Your mind shatters under constant pain and scripture-loops. You return later as an NPC enemy.

Pyre

Your wounds ignite in holy flame. Nearby enemies take D10 Stress and nearby Sisters heal D6 Faith Stress. When the fire dies, only a perfect ivory skeleton remains.

FAITH - Minor

A Brush With Shadow

Doubt manifests physically. A shadow of something vast and hateful intersects your path. Nothing happens for now, but may upgrade to Beast of Unbelief.

Crisis of Purpose

For a moment, you forget why you fight. Until restored or reassured, you cannot gain extra dice from Skills, only from Domains. [Ongoing]

Forgotten Prayers

Simple invocations vanish from memory. Liturgies stumble on the tongue. Any action framed through a prayer, vow, or rite becomes Risky. [Ongoing]

Unquiet Mind

Your inner litany becomes a howling cacophony compelling you to act in strange ways, mutter to yourself and loudly announce your shaken faith. Any friendly character that sees you marks 1d4 Faith stress. Weakness is contagious. [Immediate]

Flicker of Doubt

Images of failure and unworthiness intrude. You cannot use Faith protection. [Ongoing]

FAITH - Major

Morbid Fascination

You become compelled to closely examine the thing that shook your faith. When you try to learn more about it, roll with mastery. Doing so marks D4 Heresy stress. Refusing to investigate marks D6 Faith stress. [Ongoing]

Guilt

You become convinced you have failed the Emperor in some minor but infuriating way. You must perform a self-imposed penance (whipping, kneeling, denying rest). Until done, all actions are Risky. [Ongoing]

Beast of Unbelief

Upgraded from A Brush With Shadow. The shadow pursuing takes shape and seeps out of the walls or floors as a real entity possessing nothing but mass and hatred. It hasn't noticed you yet.

DIFFICULTY: Risky

RESISTANCE: 12

PROTECTION: 2

STRESS: D6

RESOURCE: Writhing black mass (D6 Heresy)

FAITH - Critical

The Emperor Turns His Face

You feel an absence so vast it crushes you. You sit down, lay aside your weapon, and quietly die.

False Saint

Crowds begin treating you as holy.

You start performing small miracles involuntarily.

Within this session, you burn out, ascend, or rupture in ecstatic agony.

Devotional Collapse

Your certainty fractures. Your rituals unravel. Holy verse catches in your throat. You wander off into danger, mumbling contradictory scripture, and never return.

Searing Revelation

You receive a vision no mortal could bear. Your eyes boil. Your heart stops. The last thing you say becomes local dogma.

AUTHORITY - Minor

The Sisters do not have their own money nor do they receive a salary, so their access to equipment, support and weapons is fully managed by the Ecclesiarchy, making it important to stay in their good graces. Exactly zero Imperial regulations and mandates survive contact with the reality on the ground and navigating that contradiction is one of the Sisters' unspoken duties.

Filed Incident

Your Sister Superior notes your "irregular behavior". The next time you roll on the Imperium domain, the roll is Risky.

Unwritten Rule

You did something technically allowed but customarily unacceptable. For the rest of the session, you cannot requisition new gear. Escalates to "Administrative Seizure".

Name Quietly Flagged

A discreet red-ink mark appears in your personnel file. Whenever you gain stress from rolling, roll two die and keep the highest. On escalation: "Chaperoned by an Inquisitor."

Increased Surveillance

The pict-feed on your armour and your vox logs are now monitored. A calm but firm voice occasionally interrupts with questions and unhelpful comments via vox. Any action requiring discretion or secrecy is Dangerous.

AUTHORITY - Major

Administrative Seizure

Your equipment privileges are revoked pending review. Lose one significant piece of Equipment (GM chooses, must be painful) for the next situation.

Chaperoned by an Inquisitor

An Inquisitorial Adept or Interrogator joins your squad to observe. During any Operation, the GM may introduce a Bane representing their interference. They cannot help you; they only watch, evaluate, and log.

Mandated Oath of Correction

You must perform a ritual of purity and obedience. Until completed, you cannot benefit from Protection other than that given by your equipment.

AUTHORITY - Critical

Inquisitorial Sequestration

You are taken into custody by the Inquisition. No explanations. You vanish into a shuttle. No one ever sees you again.

Excommunicate Traitors

A higher authority declares you heretic, traitor, or liability. Kill-teams are en route. Your Sisters must choose: kill you themselves, or watch strangers do it.

Bureaucratic Abyss

You are stripped of your rank, banished from the Ecclesiarchy and reassigned. Your life becomes paperwork, penance, and interrogation. You retire as a ghost in the system.

FORTUNE - Minor

Jam Breach

Your weapon suffers a temporary malfunction or spirit-stall. You must perform a risky SHAPE+Tech roll to clear it. Until then, the weapon is dead weight.

Unlucky Footing

You slip, stumble, or land in a compromised position. Your next MOVE or BREAK action is Risky.

Supply Miscalculation

Your ammunition or essentials were misreported. Downgrade a Resource you carry by one die size.

Omen of Misfortune

A small omen follows you - flickering lights, strange electrical hums, a malfunctioning servo-skull. Once per situation, the GM can force a reroll.

Restless Machine Spirit

A piece of gear refuses you; lights dim, hymns glitch, electricity crackle. The GM tells you which one it is. Until it is fixed with a Risky Tech+Bind roll or until the end of the current situation, the equipment is unusable.

FORTUNE - Major

Catastrophic Ricochet

A projectile or explosion goes awry in a way that shouldn't be physically possible. Take d8 Body Stress, ignoring Protection. An important Contact, Haven or Resource is harmed or destroyed by the accident.

Unsteady Terrain

The battlefield itself shifts - collapsing floor, ruptured pipe, surprise void draft. You are moved into a worse position or separated. Your Move action is Dangerous.

Grievance

An otherwise friendly or neutral group declares you an enemy and no longer welcomes you in their havens and abodes. Your Sisters may enter but will draw suspicion.

Lost Item

You've misplaced an item (Weapon or Resource) in unfamiliar territory. Gain a D4 Bane for the current Operation to locate it, or lose it forever.

Walking Banner of Faith

A group of people has chosen you as their spiritual leader against your wishes. They will follow you everywhere, sing your praises and loudly herald your arrival. They claim your spiritual leadership keeps them safe, and that you are responsible for their safety and wellbeing. This effect grows in scale and potency unless you take drastic action to redress it.

Spite of the Machine-God

Multiple machine-spirits rebel. Doors seal, auspex sputter, air recyclers emit noxious gas, vox shrieks with scrap-code, servitors refuse to function.

FORTUNE - Critical

A Slow And Insidious Killer

You make one bad assumption at the worst possible time. A weapon misfires, a gantry collapses, a void-seal fails. You die ironically, suddenly, stupidly.

Wrong Place

A blow meant for someone else - a bolter shot, a deadly trap, a 20kg tungsten round fired from a Voidship many light years away - kills you instantly. You collapse before you understand what happened.

The Emperor's Dice

You are caught in a catastrophic chain reaction—exploding promethium tanks, falling rubble, reactor venting. Your squad survives by inches. You do not.

CORRUPTION - Minor

Painter's Eye

Colors seem too vivid; edges halo with warp-light. Sense rolls become Risky.

Warp Scent

You smell ozone, bloodmetal, incense, or rotting sweetness no one else perceives. GM may give you false sensory impressions. Any Sister who explicitly tells you your senses are compromised must roll Bind+Corruption first.

Flicker Veins

Brief moments where your veins glow faintly in dim light. When a Sister sees it, she marks D4 Faith Stress.

Corrupted Consecration

Any Equipment or Resources you hold lose the Holy tag.

Heartless

You lose the capacity for empathy with anyone other than your Sisters. The GM may call for Stand rolls whenever you have to listen to the weak-willed rabble, incompetent bureaucrats or the cannon fodder of the military telling you their problems.

Sign of the False Saint

A brand or stain appears on your flesh resembling a saintly symbol - but subtly wrong. Civilians may worship you. Clergy fear you. Sisters may distrust you. Any Faith Fallout you take becomes Major.

CORRUPTION - Major

Daemon's Whisper

You hear a voice that might be memory, instinct, or a small watching entity. Once per session, the GM may offer you a terrible bargain: take Mastery on your next roll, but mark D4 Corruption stress after the roll.

Warp-Touched Flesh

A subtle physical change: nail-keratin darkens, eyes gleam, skin runs too hot or too cold. Your Body protection is reduced by 1. Soothing it requires an exorcism or high-level rite.

Chronal Echo

You move a fraction of a second out of sync. Your first action each situation gives you Mastery. Your second action each situation is Dangerous as reality catches up.

Vestigial Echo-Organ

A small, useless organ grows beneath your skin; knot of bone, sac of fluid, vibrating cartilage. Warp entities can easily sense this.

Angel of the Warp

Your shadow and silhouette are subtly wrong - their shapes do not match your body. Cultists and Heretics who see you immediately recognize you as a leader and an object of worship. You cannot remove Faith stress other than by acquiring Faith Fallout.

Possession Attempt

A daemon tries to crawl through your soul. Roll Dangerous Stand+Reliquary to stand firm.

Warp Spill

Reality distorts around you - shadows lengthen, time folds, metal weeps oil tears. All Chaos, Heretic or Warp enemies treat their Stress dice as one size higher against you. All allies treat Stress dice as one size lower when defending or aiding you. [Ongoing]

CORRUPTION - Critical

Possessed

A warp entity slips into you. Your Sisters must destroy you before it fully manifests. You die during the exorcism-by-force.

The Tearing

Your soul tries to leave your body and almost succeeds. Your form inverts, ruptures, or implodes. Nothing recognizable remains.

Corruptor's Mark

You become a beacon for warp entities. Infestation blooms around you. The area you're in becomes corrupted. Whatever Landmark or Haven was here is no more - it is now a new, highly dangerous Heresy domain Landmark.

The Summoned

Your corruption reaches a threshold that something notices. A daemon manifests from you, and you die as it steps through.

RESOURCES

Resources represent supplies, favors, leverage, information, matériel, relics, manpower, ammunition, medical stock, political capital, or anything else that can be expended to make a problem smaller without rolling dice.

A Resource is always a die size (D4–D12) and has a Domain associated with it. Bigger dice mean more of it, better quality, or more influence behind it.

Using Resources

When you use a Resource, you choose how it applies and describe how it's relevant and useful for the current problem. You can:

- Spend it outright (reducing its die size one or more steps, at the GM's discretion) to achieve a reasonable effect in the fiction without a roll (e.g. bribe a local official, patch an NPC's wounds, secure transport, demolish a wall)
- Roll it to either heal Stress at a Haven (remove Stress equal to the dice result)
- Roll it to Reduce an Operation's Resistance, if applicable

When you roll a Resource:

- Roll the die.
- The Resource is stepped down one die size after use.
- If it would step below D4, it is expended entirely.

Resources do not refresh automatically. They are gained through:

- Operations
- Abilities
- Exploitation of Havens
- Violence, confiscation, or salvage
- Favors called in from Bonds

Resources are blunt instruments. They solve problems efficiently and visibly. The GM should always consider what attention, resentment, or suspicion their use attracts.

BONDS

A Bond represents an ongoing relationship with a person or institution powerful enough to matter: a planetary governor, an Inquisitor, a PDF commander, a crime lord, a senior priest, a cult leader playing both sides. Bonds are not friendships. Sisters rarely have the time or the inclination for anythinglike friends. Bonds are resources built on dependence, fear, obligation, or mutual compromise.

A Bond has:

- A name
- A role within the world
- A short description of why they cannot ignore the Sisters

Gaining Bonds

You gain a Bond when:

- Someone survives because of the Sisters — and knows it
- Someone is spared, blackmailed, or coerced into cooperation
- Someone's authority is upheld or destroyed by the Sisters

- A community becomes dependent on the Sisters' presence or judgment

Bonds are rarely formed with common citizens, who are mostly beneath the Sisters' notice. If a Bond is beneath the Sisters socially or politically, it should be routed upward — their superior, patron, handler, or master.

Using Bonds

A Bond can be used to:

- Ask for favors (Resources, information, access)
- Create a Boon related to influence, authority, or logistics
- Remove Minor fallout or downgrade Major fallout to Minor by rolling D8 Stress to the bond.

You call on Bonds' influence, power, connection and resources by giving them Stress, with a die size determined by the GM and relevant to the size or danger involved in what the Sisters ask of them. Whenever a Bond takes Stress, roll for Fallout as if it were a Resistance.

As a general reference:

- 1 Stress: small favors well within their area of expertise or relevant domain. Routine actions and uncomplicated tasks.
- D4 Stress: slightly more controversial tasks. Brushes with Heresy, overreaches of authority, dipping into their own coffers.
- D6 Stress: significant asks that put the Bond in genuine danger of bodily harm, public humiliation or Inquisitorial notice.
- D8 Stress: truly outrageous requests. Murder, open heresy, betrayal of close friends.

Every time a Bond accrues Stress, the GM rolls for Fallout as if they were a playable character. If they would gain minor Fallout, they'll ask the Sisters for a small favor or announce a minor obstacle (perhaps a D4 Bane). If they would gain major Fallout, the Bond is in serious trouble and requires immediate assistance from the Sisters if they don't want them to be dead, arrested or gone.

HAVENS

While exploring or navigating a planet, Sisters might come across Havens. Havens are rare places of relative safety: fortified shrines, loyal monasteries, sealed void stations, hab-blocks at peace, compliant command bunkers, pilgrimage vaults, or sanctified encampments. They are temporary footholds for the Sisters to consider their next step and dress their wounds for the coming battles.

At a Haven, the Sisters may:

- Spend Resources to heal Stress
- Interact with Bonds, or make new ones
- Conduct rites, planning, or interrogation without immediate danger
- Trigger certain Abilities that require stability or infrastructure
- Determine their next Operation

Pressure on Havens

Havens are not inviolable. The GM should loosely track:

- How often the Sisters use a Haven
- How loudly or brutally they act nearby
- How much heresy, violence, or attention they draw

Overuse or exposure can:

- Strip a Haven of its safety
- Turn it into a contested Landmark
- Corrupt it
- Destroy it outright

A Haven lost is not easily replaced. Then again, maybe the Mission takes priority and the loss of the Haven is acceptable.

CLASSES

Canoneſs-in-Training

You are a Canoneſs in training, groomed to lead Sisters wherever the Emperor's will must be exerted. Their life is in your hands already. You didn't ask for this post — you had the burden of command thrust upon you. You were never asked if you were ready, only if you were armed. No matter. Heretics will tremble at your name, and none shall escape your judgment.

You Refresh when you publicly assert authority you do not yet truly possess, and others obey you anyway, especially if it causes consequences you cannot undo.

You must:

- Issue a command, judgment, or decree in a tense or dangerous situation
- Do so without confirmation from higher authority
- Accept the consequences

Begin play with:

Skill: Sense

Domain: Imperium

Equipment: Godwyn-De'az Bolter (D8 Bolt, Holy, Ranged, Loud) Sororitas Power Armour (1 Body 1 Faith protection)

Core Abilities

They Are Mine To Command

Once per situation, when a fellow Sister would mark any amount of Stress, you may intercede on her behalf and mark it to your Authority instead. When you suffer Authority fallout, roll with Mastery for the remainder of the situation.

They Serve Me

When you command a Sister in battle or another perilous situation, she rolls with Mastery as long as she's following your orders. If she chooses to disobey, you take D4 Authority stress and she heals the same amount of Authority stress.

Minor Abilities

Litany of Prepared Ground

Gain the Warzone domain. When you take a moment to outline a plan before violence breaks out, one ally of your choice downgrades the Risk level of their next Risky or Dangerous roll by one.

Voice That Does Not Tremble

Gain the Bind skill. Once per session, when you would take stress from speaking a vow, decree, a threat or formal judgement aloud, you may downgrade the stress die size

Sing The Liturgies And Let All Be Awed

Gain the Reliquary domain. When you loudly recite hymns or battle-prayers, nearby Sisters are emboldened You remove D4 Faith stress from any ally who can hear you.

Why Should The Faithful Suffer The Infirmary Of The Weak

Gain the Break skill. You press-gang a ragtag crew of civilians (Resistance 8, no Protections, they fight as a D6 weapon, downgraded as they take casualties) who fight and serve as a cohesive if unruly unit. Once per Situation, you may redirect any Stress gained by you or a Sister onto them.

Every Sister A Sword

Gain the Stand skill. When you choose to take a leadership role in a battle, all your Break rolls become Dangerous but every Sister (including yourself) gains 2 Body protection for the rest of the situation.

Major Abilities

By My Authority And None Other's

When you publicly assume total responsibility for the outcome of a situation — success or failure — all Sisters acting under your command treat the situation as one step less Dangerous for the rest of the scene. When the scene ends, you alone face whatever spiritual, political, or personal consequences arise, regardless of the outcome.

He Speaks Through Me And Through My Hands His Will Is Made

Once per session, you may deliver a decree: one sentence, spoken with absolute finality.

Choose a single entity, person, object, or phenomenon in the scene and declare what it is now (e.g., “This gate is open”, “She is loyal”, “This machinery is silent”, “That beast fears us”). For the rest of the situation, reality strains to obey your declaration.

Crushed Under My Treads

Roll Dangerous Bind+Imperium to emergency requisition a Castigator Battle Tank, dropped from orbit, for the rest of the Operation. All Sisters can hang onto the tank as it moves, and it must be piloted by one of the Sisters.

Castigator

Resistance: 20

Protection: 2

D12 Autocannon (Dangerous, Unreliable, Brutal, Ranged)

Lead From The Front

When you stand visibly at the forefront of danger — advancing first, refusing cover, or holding a line alone — nearby Sisters may ignore the first instance of Stress they would take in this situation, but all your rolls are Dangerous.

If you fall, break, retreat or even falter slightly, the effect ends immediately and the situation worsens.

HOSPITALLER

A Sister Hospitaller exists in two worlds. She provides healing, succor and comfort to the faithful, mending their spirits and bodies, giving the Emperor's last mercy to the wounded and hearing the confessions of the dying. On the other, she intently studies the enemies of Man and intimately know every vulnerable spot in their bodies, every poison that is lethal to them, and she aims to use this knowledge.

You Refresh when you extract truth or obedience through suffering, and convince yourself it was mercy.

You must:

- Inflict pain, deprivation, or fear deliberately
- Claim it was necessary for healing, salvation, or survival
- Be believed — by the victim, a witness, or yourself

Begin play with

Skill: Shape

Domain: Frontier

Equipment: Surgeon's Kit, Analgesic Injector (D6 Tech), Chaplet Ecclesiasticus (D4 Break, Piercing)

Core Abilities

No Sister Dies Alone

You can spend resources of any type to refresh Stress in others, rolling a die equal to their die size and spending them as normal (reducing their die size if it makes sense).

Your Wretched Weakness Condemns You

A Sister Hospitaller can easily use her tools to extract a confession or useful information from any creature capable of Gothic speech, and heals D4 Faith stress by doing so.

Minor Abilities

Pain Is Loyalty Entering The Body

Gain the Bind skill. Once per situation, when you or a nearby Sister suffers Fallout, you may immediately:

- Clear D4 stress from any Resistance on any Sister or
- Gain +1 Protection to a Resistance of your choice for the rest of the situation

Describe how the Fallout is repurposed—scarification, stimulants, threats, prayer, chemical suppression.

I'll Give You Something To Scream About

Gain the Sense skill. When you study a wounded, terrified, or restrained subject, the GM must tell you what will make them break fastest.

To Waste Is To Sin

Gain the Reliquary domain. You squeeze every bit of utility out of everything in your possession. Resources you spend drop from D4 to D2 instead of being fully consumed.

Correct Dosage, Correct Time

Gain the Tech domain. Once per session, you may declare you prepared toxins, sedatives, stimulants, or weaponized pathogens earlier. Their exact form is revealed now. They take the form of a D4-D8 Resource of any Domain, and you take D4-D8 Fortune stress.

There Is Still Work To Be Done

Gain the Warzone domain.

When you force someone to keep fighting, moving, or speaking despite injury or fear, both of you mark D4 stress to Resistances of your choice, and the action proceeds as if nothing were wrong — for now.

Major Abilities

I Decide How Much You Can Take

Once per session, when a Sister suffers Fallout, you may rewrite its narrative expression. The Fallout still applies mechanically — but you decide how it manifests in the fiction, and how it strengthens her instead of breaking her, and how it aids the mission instead of hindering it.

Field Hospital

Gain 1 Authority protection. Requisition a Haven's supplies and manpower to give an area (including the Haven itself) the Frontier domain if it doesn't have it. You oversee the construction of a field hospital, tending to the wounds of Sisters and civilians alike. While resting here, Sisters can spend resources to heal Stress (you turn them, somehow, into supplies and medicine), and you can obtain information via gossip, or resources from dead patients who no longer need them.

As I Heal So Too Do I Smite

Gain 1 Heresy protection. Your intimate, deep knowledge of anatomy - human, mutant, xeno or weirder - has made you an expert in poisons and pathogens. Immediately requisition a D6 Pack of Mixed Poisons. When disease, rot, starvation, or environmental exposure is present, you may treat it as a D6 Shape weapon you can wield against enemies.

You Will Thank Me Eventually

When you forcibly “save” someone against their will — amputation, restraint, servitorization, chemical suppression, psychic dampening — they survive, maybe even reintegrate into Imperial society, but lose something essential. For the rest of the mission, treat them as a resource, asset, or living tool rather than a person. Gain a D6 Boon.

Not To Me, Not Today

Once per session, when you or any Sister would take Fallout, you may reflect the Fallout towards an enemy, another creature or your opposition, inflicting D6 Stress upon it and negating the Fallout (without clearing Stress). Your jammed weapon works as your enemy’s breaks. An explosion meant to kill you instead opens a new, easier path. Warp incursion reveals a key truth about the enemy’s presence here.

REPENTIA

Sisters Repentia stride into battle half-clad and wholly willing to die. You are a weapon of regret sharpened into unstoppable motion. Your sins fuel your fury; only glorious death or absolution awaits you. Every breath is borrowed. Every wound is deserved. Your death will be useful, or it will be meaningless.

You Refresh when you deliberately accept suffering, humiliation, or mortal danger in place of another — especially when survival would have been easier.

You must:

- Step into harm knowingly
- Reject protection, caution, or retreat
- Continue regardless of consequence

Begin play with:

Skill: Break

Domain: Heresy

Equipment: Eviscerator Chainsword (Dio Brutal, Tiring), Penitent Robes, Absolutely Nothing Else

Core Abilities

Suffering Is Sacred

For every Ongoing Fallout you are suffering, gain 1 Protection on the corresponding Stress track. When you suffer immediate Fallout, gain 1 Protection on the corresponding Stress track for the duration of the current situation.

Sins Are Heavy

You are not allowed any possessions save your Eviscerator and Robes. You may not requisition gear, but also Fallout may never damage or remove your two items from the game. Whenever you obtain a Resource you must immediately destroy it or give it away. If you choose to keep it or use it, mark D6 Authority stress.

Minor Abilities

Strip Me Of All But Purpose

Gain the Frontier domain. You ignore environmental hardship that would slow, exhaust, or discourage others — hunger, cold, filth, radiation, corpse-dust, even vacuum for a short time.

My Blood Is My Offering

Gain the Reliquary domain. At any time, roll D6 to self-flagellate and choose either Body, Faith or Corruption stress. If the dice result is below your current stress in the chosen Resistance, add that much stress to it. If it's equal to or above your current stress in the chosen resistance, you roll with mastery on your next action.

I Have The Scent

Gain the Sense skill. You gain mastery when tracking a target or pursuing an objective through the wake of violence - spent shells, trails of blood, torn earth. You also become more easily attuned to the unmistakable scars wrought by violence. When arriving at a new place, you can always roll Domain+Sense to find such evidence and gain insight into it, such as who inflicted, who benefited and who suffered.

Emergency Haruspex

Gain the Warzone domain. When you disembowel, crush or tear through an enemy with grim fervor and fierce gusto, you can ask the GM a question about the environment, situation or enemy as if reading omens in gore, which must be answered honestly and thoroughly. Gain mastery on your next action following that omen.

No Wound Is Enough

Gain the Stand skill. When you would mark Stress, you may immediately mark +1 additional Stress to the same Resistance to:

- Increase the next Stress die you inflict by one step or
- Ignore Protection on your next roll

You decide this before Fallout is rolled.

Major Abilities

No Sinner Is Beyond My Reach

Gain the Move skill. Your Eviscerator Chainsword gains the Ranged and Reload tags (to Reload it, go and pick it up)

I Was Condemned So Others Would Not Be

When a Sister would suffer Fallout, you may take it instead — even if you were not involved in the roll. You do not negate or reduce it. You inherit it whole. For the rest of the situation, all Sisters treat the situation as one step less Dangerous as long as you remain standing. If you are removed from the scene, the GM escalates the situation immediately and without mercy.

There Is No Penance Left To Do

Once per session, you may declare that the next thing you attempt will resolve this situation. It won't resolve it safely, nor cleanly, but it will resolve it definitively. Make the roll as normal.

On any success, the situation ends on the terms you laid out.

On a failure, the situation still ends — but the GM narrates a crushing consequence to yourself.

This ability cannot be used to retreat, escape, or preserve yourself.

The Emperor Has Not Forgotten

Once per session, when you suffer Corruption Fallout, you may immediately convert it into a visible sign of martyrdom: scars, brands, implanted scripture, sanctioned mutilation. The Fallout remains, but it is publicly legible as devotion rather than taint. Until the end of the mission, Sisters acting in your presence downgrade Corruption Stress they would take by one die size.

I Perfect Myself To Make My Death Wondrous

You begin the long work of making your death worthy. Your Eviscerator is not yet fit to absolve you. It must be fed penance, terror, and blood. When you take this ability, declare your Eviscerator Unfinished. While the weapon is Unfinished:

- You cannot benefit from Protection of any kind (from armour, abilities, or allies).
- You cannot reduce incoming Stress by any means.

To refine the blade, you must complete five Penance Deeds, each witnessed and sanctified:

- Rolling a 10 on a Dangerous roll.
- Slaying a Risky or higher adversary alone.
- Taking Major Fallout.
- Having 12 or more total Stress.
- Accepting punishment, humiliation or harm for others' failures.

Each time you complete a Penance Deed, choose one upgrade below. You may not choose the same upgrade twice.

Eviscerator Upgrades

- Increase the weapon's stress die size by one step (to a maximum of D12).
- Add Brutal to the weapon (this stacks).
- Remove the Tiring tag from the Eviscerator.
- Add the Holy tag.
- Add the Spread tag.

When all five upgrades are taken, the penance ends.

Your Eviscerator is now a relic of acknowledged martyrdom. Etched, notched, and remembered.

Gain +1 Protection to every Resistance. You may benefit from Protection again.

From this point on, your absolution is inevitable. Only its timing remains in question.

RELIQUANT AT ARMS

A Reliquant-at-Arms bears the Imperium's holiest armaments. You are custodian of relics that drink heretic blood, keeper of sacred munitions, and executioner of blasphemers. The relics remember, and through you they continue their work.

You Refresh when you destroy, expend, or permanently lose a sacred relic to achieve victory — and declare the sacrifice holy.

You must:

- Render a relic unusable, spent, or annihilated
- Do so knowingly
- Publicly or privately sanctify the loss

Begin play with:

Skill: Stand

Domain: Reliquarium

Equipment: Battle-Banner, Meltagun (Dro, Dangerous, Melta)

Core Abilities

The Body of Saint Katherine

You carry a piece of Saint Katherine's body — a shard of bone, relic, or articulated fragment. It manifests when your faith is tested most intensely. Using any of your Major abilities automatically clears 1 Stress from any Sister who witnesses your miraculous power, but you also gain either D4 Corruption or D4 Authority stress, as either the veil to the Immaterium degrades or those in power question why you have such ready access to such miraculous power.

If It Is Sacred It Must Also Be Feared

When you take the time to consecrate a Resource or non-combat Equipment (or succeed a Risky [object's Domain]+Shape check to do it quickly), you turn it into a one-use weapon (D6 Holy)

Minor Abilities

The Emperor Keeps Me Steady

Gain the Shape skill. When you plant a banner or relic into the ground, you cannot be moved or knocked down by any physical means, though you still take Stress from any attempts to do so. Allies standing behind you or near the banner gain 1 Corruption and 1 Faith protection.

An Open Mind Is Like An Unguarded Fortress

Gain 1 Corruption protection and the Heresy domain. You can ritually sacrifice a resource D6 or higher to fully remove a Minor Fallout. If the resource's domain is Heresy, take Corruption stress equal to the resource's die size.

Consecrate This Ground And Drive Away Heresy

Gain the Break skill. Through ritual, fervent prayer and the judicious use of hundreds of candles, you can roll Stand+Reliquarium to give an area the Reliquarium domain. The first time each session you use this ability during an Operation, it functions as a D6 Boon.

Simulacrum of Power

Gain the Sense skill. When you study a religious or heretical object, symbol, or site, you may ask the GM one focused question about its nature, its history or those whose faith is anchored to it, including things you couldn't possibly know from mere empirical observation.

Potentially, Everything Is A Relic

Gain the Tech domain. When handling, repairing, purifying, or deciphering holy artefacts (even blasphemous ones), roll with Mastery.

Major Abilities

Saint Katherine's Bulwark

When you plant your battle-banner you may force the current situation to downgrade one step of Danger for everyone but yourself.

Saint Dominica's Chalice

You open yourself as a vessel for holy excess — wrath, zeal, mercy, all without moderation. Whenever a 10 is rolled by any Sister around you or by yourself, another Sister gets an immediate, automatic success on a followup action.

Saint Mina's Petals

From your hand, blood-spattered rose petals materialize. The ground where you spread the petals gains any Domain of your choice, and all attempts to kill or injure enemies roll with Mastery for the rest of the situation.

Saint Silvana's Argent Shroud

You invoke a silence so complete it feels like burial cloth settling over the world.

Once per session, declare that the veil thickens. For the rest of the scene:

- Warp manifestations, psychic phenomena, and daemonic influence are muted, weakened and distorted. Warp enemies downgrade their Stress die size by one step.
- Lies, possession, corruption and sorcerous effects become visible as distortions, like frost on glass.

Saint Lucia's Heart

You hold the icon aloft and chant a litany for Saint Lucia's martyrdom. A Sister of your choice does not roll for Fallout when she marks stress. When the situation ends, so does the miracle and you must roll for fallout in whatever Resistance you have the most stress in (you choose in case of a tie)

Saint Arabella's Censer

When you invoke the Censer's litany and use its holy smoke to lead the sisters on an Operation, the burning incense a beacon to follow and a rallying point for their faith, increase the size of the stress dice inflicted on the Operation, and the Operation's stress dice size on you, by one step.

DIALOGOUS

Your words are instruments of faith, reality, and control. You were trained among the Order Dialogous - keepers of languages, interpreters of doctrine, breakers of ciphered heresies, and negotiators who bend entire worlds with words alone.

On the battlefield, you are a weaponized linguist: you command clarity among the chaos of battle, unravel coded menaces, intercept and twist the enemy's orders and arrange reality as you see fit by speaking it into existence.

You Refresh when you impose a single, definitive interpretation on a contested truth — and silence all alternatives.

You must:

- Resolve ambiguity through doctrine
- Eliminate competing interpretations (through reason, authority, manipulation or violence)
- Be accepted as the final word

Begin play with:

Skill: Bind

Domain: Tech

Equipment: Laud Hailer, Dialogous Staff (D4 Holy)

Core Abilities

I Am The Voice Of The Emperor

Once per session, when you translate, interpret, or comment on any text, language, transmission, order, law, command or liturgical phrase - mundane, Imperial or heretical - you may declare: "This is what it truly means" without needing to roll. Everyone involved in the situation accepts your interpretation, and you mark D4 Authority stress.

My Faith Is Stronger Because My Voice Is Louder

Whenever you encounter heretical words - writing, graffiti, chants, prayers, rituals - you may dispel them with a counter-verse from orthodox liturgy. Take D4 Corruption stress as the act briefly thins the veil.

Minor Abilities

None Are Beyond The Order's View

Gain the Sense skill. When you seek information on a target by consulting the Codices, investigating written material or consulting experts, you roll with Mastery.

If I Must Speak Your Vile Tongue

Gain the Heresy domain. You know the basics of various Xenos languages - enough to make yourself understood, read their script and understand conversations. You also intuitively understand conversational binharic, remote planets' drifting dialects of Gothic, all sorts of Low Gothic cants and slang and, with some effort, can infer the meanings of symbols and coded messages you've never encountered before.

Drown Out Heresy

Gain the Move skill. Through your Laud-Hailer, your own powerful voice is amplified manyfold by the grace of the Emperor, emboldening your Sisters and making the enemies of mankind cower before the strength of your belief. Downgrade the Risk level of the next roll to directly engage an enemy. Heal D4 Faith or Corruption Stress.

Palimpsest of War

Gain the Warzone domain. When you have access to enemy orders, signals, or inscriptions (written, spoken, or coded), you can reinterpret them to mislead their originators and intended recipients. Once per session, you may impose a false assumption on the opposition that lasts until directly contradicted.

Cloistered Insight

Gain the Reliquary domain. You carry a personal, concealed library of forbidden glosses and marginalia. Once per session, you may declare that you have read something relevant to this, and ask the GM for (or decide together) one true, precise, convenient detail — followed by one dangerous implication. Take D4 Fortune stress.

Major Abilities

Innocence Proves Nothing

Roll Bind+Reliquary to spend uninterrupted time decoding signals, scripture-engines, or warp-laced messages.

Alternatively, roll Bind+Heresy to find a trail of symbols, messages or codes that will potentially lead to heretic lairs, xenos warrens or deeply Warp-touched hideouts. Be careful what you wish for.

Judgment Without Appeal

Once per session, you may declare an enemy, structure, or truth irredeemably heretical.

For the remainder of the scene:

- Actions taken to destroy or silence it roll with mastery.
- Actions taken to preserve, study, or negotiate with it are automatically Dangerous. If an NPC or enemy tries to do it, you will always get a chance to act first.

This judgment cannot be rescinded.

As It Left My Lips It Became Truth

Once per Mission, you may introduce a necessary falsehood into the fiction: a forged order, a fabricated sanction, a saint who never existed. The lie exists as a reusable D6 Boon (limit one use per Operation). If you ever roll 1 on this boon, the lie collapses and you take D8 Authority stress.

War Hymn

Roll Tech+Bind to turn your loud-hailer as loud as it will go and begin shouting into it. Describe your intent. For good or ill, your arrival is heard long before you're seen. Royal welcomes are prepared for the Sisters in loyal cities, but those resentful of your presence or hostile to the Emperor are as likely to scatter and flee as they are to set up an ambush — but maybe that's exactly what you want.

A Door Opens Where There Was None

When two factions (including the Sisters or not) are about to clash, panic, or catastrophically misinterpret one another, you step in and mediate by translating intent and desire, if not necessarily the truth, to avoid escalation or direct escalation to serve your purposes.

Roll Bind + appropriate Domain to shape the violence as you see fit: your words determine who inflicts it and who receives, who is blamed and who benefits, and how this helps the Mission.

DOMINION

Dominions are trained to read a battlefield — and a room, and a crowd, and a ruin — the way others read scripture. They move first because they must know how the world will snap when struck. A Dominion's training sharpens faith into battlefield acumen: notice the tiny misstep in a formation, the gait of a liar, the angle a beam will give way, a lull in vigilance. In any advance they seek the lynchpin, the single point which, if broken, will make the rest fall apart. They march ahead and point the way for others to follow; and they do so with a strategist's eye and a sanctified calm.

You Refresh when you identify a threat (real or imagined) and move first to annihilate it before anyone else understands it was there.

You must:

- Act on incomplete or intuitive information
- Strike decisively
- Prevent discussion, hesitation, or consensus

Begin play with:

Skill: Break

Domain: Warzone

Equipment: Storm Bolter (D8 Point-Blank, Dangerous), Melta Charges (D4 Break), Sororitas Power Armour (1 Body protection, 1 Faith protection)

Core Abilities

Eyes Open Like Flame

When you take a deliberate moment to survey a scene — a ruin, a battlefield, a drifting voidship, a crowded market — you may roll Sense + Domain.

The GM answers one direct question about immediate dangers: Where's the weakest link? What truth is being kept from us? What here is the most dangerous threat?

Break the Anchor

When you commit to smashing the point that holds an enemy together — a leader, a morale hinge, a sorcerous focus, a vox array — you may roll Break + Warzone. On a success you create an opening or identify an advantage to be gained, but must follow through immediately or the opportunity will slip through your fingers.

Minor Abilities

How Righteous My Wings

Immediately requisition a Jump Pack. Gain the Move skill. Once per session, when you use the Jump Pack to charge directly at an enemy with a melee weapon or shoot from an advantageous position, your weapon's die size is one step higher.

Suffer Not

Gain the Sense skill. Once per situation, when you engage a foe who you know for a fact has harmed innocents or a fellow Sister, roll with mastery on your next attempt to destroy or incapacitate them.

Last Sister Standing

Gain the Heresy domain. Once per session, after the GM has rolled for fallout, you may delay the act of gaining new Fallout until the end of the current situation. When the situation resolves, upgrade any Minor fallout you would gain to Major.

Machine-Spirit Liturgies

Gain the Tech domain. Once per situation, you may ignore the Dangerous or Unreliable tag on a weapon for a single roll, after rolling.

Preferred Ground

Gain the Bind skill. When you force a situation into close, claustrophobic, or volatile range, downgrade the risk level of your next damaging roll in that situation.

Major Abilities

No Ground Worth Holding

Once per situation, you may voluntarily abandon an advantageous position, vantage point, territory, cover, or an objective to turn retreat into a weapon — to set an ambush, lay a trap or something else. When you do, roll Move+Warzone to inflict D8 Stress on the current Operation or adversary, ignoring all protection.

Burn The Path Forward

When you act alone to force progress through an overwhelmingly dangerous situation — collapsing tunnels, kill-zones, ritual nexuses, sealed strongpoints, an unwinnable argument — the group may bypass that obstacle entirely if you succeed. All your rolls in this effort are Dangerous.

Fight Another Day

Take D6 Authority stress to abandon your current Operation: you regroup and rethink the plan. The Operation fails, and dire consequences ensue, but you may define an alternative Operation with half the Resistance as the original one, and whatever Domains you decide it has. Your fellow Sisters clear D4 Stress.

Demolition Is A Form Of Prayer

When you explosively destroy infrastructure, engines, reliquaries, terrain or living creatures as an act of faith, choose one:

- Inflict Stress as though using a D12 Spread weapon
- Create a D10 Boon from the wreckage
- Negate the next Complication arising from the Operation

Mark D6 Faith or Corruption stress (your choice).

I Am The Vessel For His Holy Justice

Once per session, roll Dangerous Reliquary+Shape to call forth the miracle of smiting the unfaithful where they stand. If engaged with an enemy, this works as a D12 Holy weapon. Otherwise, the sight of your burning eyes calling forth fire, lightning or a holy ray of light freezes all around you in their places, as the awe of witnessing such a miracle mesmerizes them. This calcifies into a D6 Boon for your current or next Operation.

ORDER

Each Sister belongs to an Order: part creed, part family. Orders shape everything: how a Sister prays, how she fights, what she fears, and what she hides.

No Order is homogenous, yet each has unmistakable traits, obsessions, and rituals that set their daughters apart in the eyes of the God-Emperor.

At character creation, each player chooses the Order their Sister hails from. The choice of Order provides some aesthetic and tonal pointers, a Refresh action in addition to the Refresh action provided by their Class, and a list of trinkets, two of which the Sister carries with her at all times.

Trinkets may be picked from the list provided or rolled for with a D10. They have no immediate mechanical value but provide some character to the Sister, light roleplaying nudging and maybe, when all else is lost, a last burst of inspiration and grit to keep fighting.

Feel free to rename orders or make up your own if there's a canon or fanmade Order you really vibe with.

Our Martyred Lady

Black-armored, flame-marked, and thunder-voiced, the Daughters of the Martyr carry their history like a brand. These Sisters believe that pain is the holiest currency, that suffering is proof of devotion, and that victory purified by blood becomes a relic in itself.

Where other Orders seek understanding or discipline, the Martyr's daughters rush to face the worst dangers first with the deeply held conviction that it should always be them.

You Refresh when you take on suffering meant for others and refuse recognition for it.

You must:

- Voluntarily accept harm, blame, or punishment
- Prevent another from suffering it
- Receive no praise, absolution, or gratitude

Trinkets:

1. A scorched purity seal that still smells faintly of prometheum.
2. A broken rosary crystal from a Sister who died gloriously.
3. A strip of ceramite engraved with the name of a martyr known only to your Order.
4. A tear-shaped glass vial filled with ashes from a burned shrine.
5. A chain of fingerbones from fallen Sisters, each inscribed with a plea.
6. A scorched votive candle that never seems to melt.
7. A hymnal page stained with another's blood.
8. A shard of cracked armor your Superior insists you keep as a reminder.
9. A reliquary containing a flake of charred parchment said to be from Dominica's own blade.
10. A soot-black veil worn during rites of pain.

Ebon Chalice

The oldest of the Sisterhood, born from Alicia Dominica's first disciples. Their armor is austere and colorless, their voices calm and unwavering. They speak doctrine with a stillness that feels like judgment.

The Ebon Chalice strive for perfect orthodoxy in all things—hymn-singing, formation, ritual, expression. Their serenity is a weapon and their inflexibility is a shield. Their devotion is precise. Their certainty, absolute.

You Refresh when you correct impurity with cold precision; without anger, doubt, or hesitation.

You must:

- Enforce doctrinal purity, through words or deeds
- Damage someone's trust, shame them or cause them harm by doing so
- Show no remorse

Trinkets:

1. A perfectly folded square of jet-black silk used in purity inspections.
2. A tiny chalice charm filled with consecrated oil.
3. A silver stylus for correcting scriptural errors.
4. A prayer-book, its margins filled with doctrinal notes.
5. An incense pellet that smells like cold stone and old parchment.
6. A shard of obsidian carved with liturgical geometry.
7. A steel comb meant to maintain the exact hairstyle of the Order.
8. A rigid banner-ribbon embroidered with flawless calligraphy.
9. A tiny wax-sealed envelope containing a disciplinary reprimand you once received.
10. A chalk-white icon of Dominica with a blank, perfect face.

Bloody Rose

Red-armored fanatics who laugh in the face of artillery and whose violent charges are preceded by loud hymns bursting forth from their lips. Their every gesture burns with the joy of righteous wrath.

They believe faith is strongest when it is aflame, that the Emperor's love is best expressed through the obliteration of His foes, and that anger, properly sanctified, is a prayer more honest than any whispered text.

A Bloody Rose Sister in full fury is both horrifying and beautiful, a comet of violence carving a path of absolution.

You Refresh when you escalate violence beyond necessity and achieve victory because of it.

You must:

- Reject restraint
- Refuse the option to de-escalate
- Exert your will through wrath

Trinkets:

1. A fragment of chain soaked in consecrated battle-oil.
2. A red-dyed feather token given after your first charge.
3. A cracked tooth from a slain heretic, mounted on wire.
4. A sliver of stained-glass crimson with warped edges.
5. A prayer-scarf scorched by muzzle discharge.
6. A leather band wrapped around your wrist, etched with battle-counts.
7. A spent melta charge repurposed as a lucky charm.
8. A tiny sachet containing dust from a detonated prometheum tank.
9. A cloth scrap torn from your first damaged armor.
10. A bone die with every face marked with the Aquila.

Valorous Heart†

Grey-armored, granite-willed stoics who hold lines that should not be able to hold and survive wounds that should have destroyed them. They disdain displays of joy, grief, fear, or doubt. To them, faith is measured in endurance: the quiet refusal to fall, and stillness in the face of terror. A Valorous Heart Sister does not break. She erodes only after the world itself has shattered around her.

You Refresh when you endure extreme hardship without acknowledgment, and deny that it affected you at all.

You must:

- Suffer visibly
- Refuse aid or comfort
- Continue as if unchanged

Trinkets:

1. A smooth stone carried during meditative pain-testing rites.
2. A length of grey ribbon tied in memory of others.
3. A pocket-sized block of unpainted ceramite.
4. A muted rosary whose beads are cold even in sunlight.
5. A scrap of parchment listing your failings in tiny handwriting.
6. A broken blade tip worn as proof of survival.
7. A wax tablet you use to record each wound sustained.
8. A ritual nail used for trials of fortitude.
9. A dull-metal icon of the Emperor with no ornamentation at all.
10. A strip of plain cloth used to bind wounds, never replaced until it's so full it leaks blood.

Sacred Rose

White-armored contemplatives whose serenity borders on supernatural. They carry incense instead of fury, logic instead of zeal, and speak softly even while their bolters roar.

Their calm spreads like a blessing through the battlefield; their precision is almost musical. They believe that fearlessness is a gift that must be shared, and so they walk into fire with quiet poise, expecting the universe to fall into harmony around them.

You Refresh when you impose penance on yourself or others with perfect calm—even as it destroys something beautiful or beloved.

You must:

- Deliberately choose discipline over compassion or expediency
- Enact punishment personally
- Accept the loss as necessary

Trinkets:

1. A tiny incense burner shaped like a rosebud.
2. A white prayer ribbon that never stains, no matter what touches it.
3. A small polished mirror used for contemplation.
4. A ceramic bead painted with a serene face.
5. A muted chime that rings only in your hand.
6. A vial of perfumed oil for calming rites.
7. A folded letter never meant to be opened.
8. A pressed white flower kept between psalms.
9. A small carved dove representing fearlessness.
10. A soft cloth used to clean your sacred wargear with reverence rather than haste.

CAMPAIGN STRUCTURE

This is a basic, broad strokes series of tables (roll randomly to embrace chaos, choose to exert more control) to determine the initial situation and setup for the Mission. I highly suggest consulting the Lexicanum or the Rogue Trader/Dark Heresy books for inspiration on fleshing out details of each world. Roll on the tables for random generation, or pick from the list (or make up your own).

World Type

1. Agri-World – Monocrop plains, starving serfs, food tithe unrest.
2. Civilised World – Bureaucracy, noble intrigue, seditious cults.
3. Dead World – Abandoned, or dead for an ominous reason.
4. Death World – Hyper-lethal fauna, toxic storms, killer flora.
5. Cemetery World – Tomb-vaults, ossuaries, corpse-tithes.
6. Hive World – Overcrowded misery, gangs, industry, heresy.
7. Feudal World – Knightly orders, superstition, isolated villages.
8. Research Station (orbital or planetary) – secretive discoveries.
9. Forge World – Mechanicus power, forbidden technology.
10. Feral World – Primitive tribes, forgotten ruins, strange rites.

Secondary classification

1. Cardinal World (major Ecclesiarchy seat)
2. Frontier World (barely settled)
3. Husk World (resource-stripped ruin, mining clans, archeotech scavengers)
4. Knight World (Questoric household politics)
5. Paradise World (decadence, corruption)
6. Penal World (guards, prisoners, labyrinthine prison wards)
7. Quarantined World (plague, possession, psychic outbreak)
8. Shrine World (pilgrimage, relics, martyr cults)
9. Warp-Tainted World (thin veil, psychic scars)
10. Ghost World (inhabited but quietly wrong)

Why these Sisters were thrown together

1. Only survivors of separate prior deployments.
2. All bearing different miracles on record.
3. Hand-selected for doctrinal conflict (test case).
4. A mistake in the deployment logs. Nobody owns responsibility.
5. As punishment for a collective minor infraction.
6. Assigned because each Order demanded representation.
7. The voidship suffered casualties; replacements are haphazard.
8. A political compromise between feuding ecclesiarchs.
9. They were meant to be assigned elsewhere - vox order corrupted.
10. Their combination matches a prophecy in the ship's archives.

And they're sent to

1. Recover a stolen Relic: a reliquary, saint's bone, sanctified banner, or forbidden archive.
2. Purge a Heretical Sect: blasphemers, apostates, wild preachers, miracle-fakers, Chaos worshippers.
3. Investigate Claims of a Living Saint: the most delicate possible mission; can spark planetary upheaval.
4. Cleanse a Contaminated Shrine: profanation, daemonic staining, warp-bleed, corruption in the reliquary chambers.
5. Audit Ecclesiarchy Authorities for Corruption: governors, Cardinals, Shrine Custodians. The Sororitas do this routinely and it's never easy.
6. Quell a Rogue Ministorum Order: a convent fallen to doctrinal drift or zealotry that has become dangerous.
7. Sanction a Heretical Machine Cult: techno-mystics praying to machine-spirits in ways that aren't approved.
8. Destroy or Secure a Blessed Artefact: it might be fake, tainted, or unstable. Also: war over it.
9. Hunt a Witch: psyker not registered, rogue astropath, self-appointed prophet.
10. Deny Xenos-Corrupted Faith Practices: eldar saint-veneration, Ork "angels", T'au syncretism infecting local rites.

OPERATIONS

While the Sisters are always dropped into a planet, ship or station with a specific Mission to accomplish, their goals are usually too difficult, vague or badly defined by the Prioress to be directly approached and fulfilled. Intel going into the mission is almost always scarce, and the opposition tends to outgun the Sisters as a unit. Therefore, Sisters have taken to dividing any given Mission into more manageable chunks called Operations.

In gameplay terms, an Operation is a sub-goal that advances the overall Mission in some way. Each Operation has a measure of Stress, usually between 8 for simpler Operations and all the way up to 20 for massively difficult and treacherous Operations. If you're thinking of an Operation with more than 20 Stress, there's almost certainly a way to divide it up into two or more smaller Operations.

Just like Stress inflicted on a Sister is an abstract measure of attrition on her mind, body and soul, the Stress inflicted by the Sisters against an Operation's resistance also represents abstract progress towards completing the goal, and when an Operation's Resistance drops to zero, the goal is fulfilled.

GM note: it is very important that the goal is fulfilled. There may be complications, the Sisters may arrive at their goal battered and broken, there may be a big twist as they complete it but they complete it. If the goal is to reach a place, they reach it. If the goal is to identify a murderer, they identify them. Don't take victories away from them.

Anatomy of an Operation

Title

A short, descriptive title that explicitly states the goal ("Escort the Pilgrim Fleet", "Navigate the Labyrinth", "Complete the Ritual", "Root Out The Cultist Leader").

Domains

Almost always two Domains that are likely to come up in the course of the Operation. Finding your way around sterile, lifeless tunnels surrounding a sacred Cogitator might involve knowledge of Tech and Reliquary. Investigating crimes covered up by Prefectus Administratum could involve Imperium and Heresy.

Stress

The default die size of stress inflicted on the Sisters when they fail or partially succeed while directly pursuing the Operation's goals. If during the course of purging a Hive-nest of Heretics they must also fight an Inquisitor who suspects them of colluding with the enemy, the fight itself is not part of the Operation, and Stress would be inflicted depending on what the Inquisitor throws at the Sisters. Directly affecting the Operation is always more abstracted than that and serves to condense a variety or a sequence of actions into a single roll.

Resistance

The amount of Stress the Sisters must inflict on the Operation to consider it fulfilled. By default, succeeding or partially succeeding on a roll to advance the Operation inflicts 1d4 of Stress on it, though skills, resources and Boons (more on those later) can increase this.

Description

A brief outline of the context for the Operation and any known threats, obstacles or variables the Sisters will be keeping in mind as they perform their holy duties.

Complications

A list of things that might happen during the course of the Operation and various obstacles the Sisters must overcome or avoid.

Whenever the Sisters gain a Boon, they may use it at any time (by rolling its corresponding die) to inflict that much free stress on the Operations. Conversely, when they gain a Bane, the GM rolls its corresponding die to add that much stress to an Operation.

Below are some sample Operations that cover a few common goals the Sisters might set for themselves or be assigned to complete. These are intentionally made generic and vague to make them easy to re-flavor and slot into any World the Sisters might find themselves in.

MARCH

A hazardous journey across hostile, treacherous or shifting terrain.

Stress: d6

Resistance: 10

Common Domains: Frontier, Warzone

Examples:

Crossing ash wastes in irradiated storms

Navigating a war-torn hive where the front shifts hourly

Maneuvering across a derelict void station riddled with traps

Events (D6)

1. Extreme weather or battlefield hazards shift suddenly.
2. Unstable ground threatens to collapse into sinkholes, trenches, or void.
3. The path is littered with symbols or offerings to forbidden powers.
4. Enemy scouts or feral packs shadow the squad from afar.
5. An Imperial detachment or local enclave bars your passage and demands compliance with their protocols.
6. Something unseen stalks you.

PURGE

Identify, isolate, and eliminate corruption, infestation, or heresy.

Stress: d6

Resistance: 12

Common Domains: Heresy, Warzone

Examples

Clearing a Chaos cult's ant colony-like secret sanctum beneath a manufactorum

Burning out a xenoform infestation hidden in an Imperial border fort

Rooting out Traitorus Militarium housed in Imperial barracks

Events (D6)

1. Innocents are intermingled with heretics
2. The corruption alters the environment - walls breathe, machines chant, icons warp.
3. The Heresy seems to be led by a high ranking Imperial official, such as a planetary governor.
4. A loyal Imperial unit has taken severe corruption
5. Purification flames or explosives risk spreading the infestation unless applied carefully.
6. The heretic leader offers parley, claiming forbidden knowledge about your Mission.

INVESTIGATION

Piece together clues, question witnesses, decode records, follow trails.

Stress: d6

Resistance: 10

Common Domains: Imperium, Heresy

Examples:

Unraveling a forged saint's lineage

Hunting a traitor cell through conflicting testimonies

Tracking a stolen relic across bureaucratic divisions

Events (D6)

1. Evidence contradicts core tenets of Imperial doctrine - or appears to.
2. A witness begs protection in exchange for information, but their loyalty is dubious.
3. Suppressed documents are guarded by a zealous official who resents Sororitas authority.
4. Records have been doctored using heretek techniques.
5. Two factions each insist the other is corrupted; both may be lying.
6. A confession is obtained, but it implicates someone vital to your Mission.

RELIQUARY

Retrieve, secure, or interpret sacred relics and the spiritual spaces around them, as Heresy seeks to impede you.

Stress: d6

Resistance: 12

Common Domains: Reliquary, Imperium

Examples

Recovering a saint's ossified hand from a collapsing shrine

Escorting an uncovered relic through hostile streets to safety

Discerning the authenticity of an artifact venerated by a frontier settlement

Events (D6)

1. The relic exerts subtle psychic or emotional pressure on those nearby.
2. Rival claimants - Ecclesiarchy, Guard, locals - all demand stewardship.
3. The shrine's mechanisms lock down, requiring purity rites or exact recitations.
4. A superstitious crowd refuses the relic's departure.
5. The relic reacts to the Sisters' presence, triggering visions or sensory distortions.
6. Something profane has already touched the relic; its taint spreads like frost.

ESCORT/PROTECT

Transport a person, relic, or group safely through danger or unrest.

Stress: d6

Resistance: 12

Common Domains: Imperium, Frontier

Examples

Escorting pilgrims across contested territory

Guarding an Ecclesiarch envoy with fragile political standing

Moving a reliquary convoy through bandit-infested wastes

Events (D6)

1. The escorted party panics or disobeys at the worst possible moment.
2. Attacking forces attempt to isolate a single high-value target.
3. The group shelters someone who secretly opposes your Mission.
4. Environmental hazards demand rerouting or immediate triage.
5. The protected party witnesses something faith-shaking and must be calmed or contained.
6. A seemingly loyal bodyguard reveals ulterior motives.

GRAND ASSAULT

A massive battle where the Sisters are key actors; the Operation zooms into pivotal duels, holds, or maneuvers.

Stress: d6

Resistance: 12

Common Domains: Reliquary, Imperium

Examples

Holding a breach against endless Daemon or Xeno assault until reinforcements arrive

Spearheading a shock strike to break an enemy command node

Coordinating with Guard armor to overrun entrenched heretics

Events (D6)

1. A critical allied unit collapses and is isolated from the rest of the army, surrounded by the enemy
2. Enemy champions emerge, demanding single combat.
3. Vox-lines jam with panicked prayers and screams from corrupted troops.
4. A massive weapon misfires or charges beyond safe levels.
5. The battlefield shifts - trenches flood, buildings collapse, artillery realigns.
6. Heretical sorcery or xeno-tech warps the rules of combat around you.

EQUIPMENT

The following pages include possible equipment the Sisters might carry. Their class provides some starting equipment, and every advancement lets them requisition additional equipment: Minor advancements for Minor equipment, Major advancements for Major equipment.

Equipment has Tags, short descriptors with mechanical and narrative weight that describe how the equipment behaves. The goal is for players to use the tags as a template to make their own equipment, as long as it makes sense within the fiction of the Adepta Sororitas—who, for instance, favor the bolter, melta and flamer but normally would not be caught dead using a lasgun or Xenos weaponry.

Tag	Effect
Accurate	If you take time to set up before combat, roll with mastery.
Block	When using this weapon to deal damage, roll the Stress you gain twice and take the lowest result.
Bloodbound	Mark D4 Body stress to roll with mastery for the rest of the situation.
Bolt	Against unarmored targets, roll stress twice and keep the highest.
Brutal	Roll stress twice, keep the highest. Stacks.
Burning	On inflicting stress: target takes an extra D4 stress every time they take Stress unless extinguished.
Close	This is a melee weapon, or its range is so short it might as well be.
Conduit	Mark D4 Faith stress to roll with mastery for the rest of the situation.
Dangerous	If you roll maximum stress, mark D6 Body stress.
Debilitating	Once per situation: on inflicting stress, the next attack against the target is rolled with mastery.
Distressing	If you roll maximum stress, mark D6 Faith stress.
Dual	Roll Stress twice and add the results if dual-wielding two of this weapon
Far Range	Can be used at extreme range.
Heavy	Take double stress from using this weapon.
Holy	Against Warp-tainted, heretic, or daemonic foes: the minimum Stress inflicted is always 4.

Tag	Effect
Loud	If you roll maximum stress, mark D6 Fortune stress.
Limited X	Can be used X times per situation.
Melta	Ignores Protection
One-Shot	Can only be used once per situation.
Penitent	Mark D3 Body stress when inflicting stress.
Piercing	Ignores Body Protection
Plasma	Dangerous; if you roll maximum stress, deal double stress.
Point-Blank	+1 stress die step at close range; -1 at long range.
Ranged	Can be used at range.
Reliquary	If you roll maximum stress, take D6 Faith stress.
Reload	Must spend time reloading before reuse.
Spread	Nearby creatures take D4 stress from this weapon.
Suppressive	On a success: a second nearby target marks D3 Fortune stress.
Tiring	On failure, reduce the stress dice size you inflict by 1 for the situation.
Unreliable	On failure, cannot be used for the remainder of the situation.
Volatile	On failure, mark D6 Fortune stress.
Wyrd	If you roll maximum stress, take D6 Corruption stress.

Gear of the Adepta Sororitas

Minor Requisition Gear

- Bolt Pistol (D6): Ranged, Bolt, Loud
- Chain Bayonet (D6): Brutal, Point-Blank
- Chainsword (D8): Brutal, Loud
- Chirurgeon's Tools, weaponized (D4): Piercing, Distressing
- Dialogous Staff (D4): Debilitating
- Frag Grenade (D8): Spread, Volatile, One-Shot
- Neural Whip (D6): Debilitating
- Punch Dagger (D4): Piercing
- Sarissa (D6): Point-Blank (attaches to Bolt weapon)
- Seraphim Hand Flamer (D6): Burning, Dual, Ranged
- Shield (bash) (D3): Block

Major Requisition Gear

- Condemnor Boltgun (D8): Bolt, Holy, Reload, Ranged
- Flamer (D8): Burning, Spread, Loud, Ranged
- Godwyn-De'az Bolter (D8): Bolt, Holy, Ranged, Loud
- Storm Bolter (D10): Bolt, Point-Blank, Dangerous
- Heavy Bolter (D12): Heavy, Ranged, Suppressive, Bolt
- Heavy Flamer (D12): Burning, Heavy, Spread, Point-Blank
- Krak Grenade (D10): Melta, Volatile, One-Shot
- Meltagun (D10): Melta, Ranged, Loud
- Multi-Melta (D12): Melta, Heavy, Ranged, Volatile
- Plasma Pistol (D8): Plasma, Ranged, Dangerous
- Power Maul (D8): Brutal, Heavy, Dangerous
- Power Sword (D8): Piercing, Holy, Conduit
- Seraphim Inferno Pistol (D8): Melta, Ranged
- Sororitas Power Armour: 1 Blood protection, 1 Faith protection

RUNNING THE GAME

A lot of advice here will be repeated from earlier chapters, but it's nice to have it all in one place:

This game's balance is out of whack on purpose. The Sisters can, and will be tempted to, solve everything messily by shooting everyone. This is extremely easy for them to do, but there should be consequences.

Your job is not to defeat the Sisters, outplay them, or preserve your carefully written antagonists. Your job is to apply force to what they care about, watch how they respond, and follow the consequences honestly. We're here to tell a story more than we are here to "win".

If you've run Heart or Spire, most of this will feel familiar. If you haven't: read this section carefully. It matters more than any stat block.

YOUR MAIN DUTIES

As the GM, you do not take turns, you do not roll dice except to check for Fallout, and you do not "play" enemies. Instead, you:

- Establish situations
- Apply pressure when Sisters hesitate, fail, or overreach
- Escalate fiction when Stress is taken
- Decide what Fallout happens and what it means
- Portray a hostile, uncaring universe that still believes it is righteous

Enemies do not act because it's "their turn". They act when the Sisters give them room to. Through negligence, conceit, pride or misfortune, it is the actions and lack of action of the Sisters that make the story move forward and the world turn. If the Sisters want something to stop happening, they must act decisively, but there should always be more threats than there are Sisters, forcing them to be spread thin or choose what's worth sacrificing. Hesitation is defeat.

Rolling dice means the stakes are high

Only call for a roll when something meaningful is at stake. In other words, if failure wouldn't matter, don't roll. If success wouldn't change anything, don't roll.

The Sisters are elite warriors of faith. Let them succeed at routine violence. Roll when the world pushes back. Very little can genuinely threaten a Sister.

A roll means:

- Someone might get hurt
- Something might be lost
- The situation might worsen
- The Sisters might draw attention they can't afford
- The Mission is in peril
- The enemy is making decisive moves

Stress is the story engine

Stress is an abstract measure of pressure, applied to belief, to bodies, to reputation, to souls.

When a Sister takes Stress:

- Describe what that looks like right now
- Show how it narrows their options
- Make it visible to the other Sisters

However, Stress is not direct damage. Only when Stress calcifies into Fallout does real harm start to be put into play.

Fallout alters the fiction

When Fallout triggers, choose something that either:

- Complicates the current situation
- Creates future problems
- Forces a choice
- Attracts attention
- Accrues attrition or taxes resources
- Leads the story down a new, interesting path.

Good fallout:

- Makes Sisters rely on each other
- Shakes faith and prompts questions
- Leaves scars others can see
- Creates obligations or enemies
- Makes the world less stable

Playing enemies

Enemies are obstacles in the way of the Sisters just as much as environmental hazards, political instability or warp infection. While there's a few extra rules for violence in this game, a firefight against an enemy doesn't really work any differently than trying to repair a vehicle, decode a Xenos message or sanctify a corrupted relic.

Enemies have their own goals, methods, desires, allies and fears. Put those front and center and make every enemy feel like a character, not just a stat block.

Show what they want by what they're doing right now. There's no time to be cheeky and no need to hide information. Warhammer 40K villains are grandiloquent, hammy and crass. Give the Sisters the information they need and play to find out how they act.

When a roll fails or succeeds at a cost:

- Advance the enemy's agenda
- Reveal a new threat
- Make the situation worse in a clear, visible way
- Tax the Sisters' resources
- Force a difficult choice
- Close an open path

Escalation is your most important tool

When in doubt, escalate.

- Make the situation bigger
- Make the stakes clearer
- Make the consequences harder to ignore

Escalation does not mean more enemies. It means less room to breathe. If the Sisters ever have a moment to catch their breath — no they don't. Something terrible happens. It's always an emergency.

Havens are not safe, but they are stable

A Haven is a place where people endure. It functions, and survives. The wheel turns, again and again. A Haven has routines, leaders, and compromises. It has clans and old feuds and weird little customs. At a Haven:

- Learn what this world is sacrificing to keep going
- Meet people who cannot leave
- Discover uncomfortable truths
- Take on obligations
- Regroup and move out

Temptation, Corruption, and Heresy

Corruption is an ever-present threat in the 41st millennium. As the armed branch of the Ecclesiarchy, Adepta Sororitas face it head-on and purge corruption and heresy wherever it rears its head. While their Faith protects them, they are not immune. While it's almost impossible for a Sister of Battle to fall to corruption and become a heretic, mere exposure to heresy and the Warp has an indelible effect on any human's body, heart and soul. However, it can be hard for players to actually seek out corruption instead of filling it full of bolter shells the moment they see it.

As GM, your job is not to force corruption, but to make it seem useful. Every planet the Sisters visit should be littered with advantages that work too well: forbidden data-vaults, a xenos device that stabilises a collapsing reactor, compliant cult leaders, xenos intermediaries, sorcerers who already know the enemy's plans, unsanctioned relics that thrum with holy power when held, weapons that bite deeper than they should. And they're welcome to attempt to use them to their advantage, if they believe their faith is strong enough to protect them.

Always be clear about the cost. When the Sisters act on heretical advantages, warn them openly which Stress they are courting. Using forbidden knowledge invites Corruption. Leaning on relics not sanctioned to them strains Authority. Experiencing first-hand how bending dogma to achieve objectives bites into Faith stress. You are not tricking the players — you are presenting them with a clear choice between purity and victory.

Pull each Sister differently. A Sister blazing with zeal should be confronted with the human cost of her violence: compliant citizens crushed under doctrinal efficiency, loyal servants broken because they were in the way. The Sister might not care, but the player almost certainly will. A more open-minded and pragmatic Sister should be shown the stability of dogma: worlds that run smoothly because rules were followed, institutions that endure because compromise was refused. When they stray, show them what Imperial order would have prevented.

Corruption should never feel random. It should feel earned, justified, and increasingly difficult to avoid.

Giving Each Class What They Want

Players tell you what they want through their class choice, their abilities, and the Beats they pursue. You do not need to hide this. Lean into it and don't be subtle or coy about it.

Below is guidance on what each class is likely seeking from play — and how you can apply pressure.

Canoness-in-Training

Wants: Authority, consequence, responsibility, command that matters.

Give them: Decisions that bind others. Orders that succeed but cost lives. Situations where obedience is uncertain.

Leverage: Authority stress, Bonds who obey but resent, consequences that follow them alone. Make them choose between legitimacy and results.

Hospitaller

Wants: Control over suffering, mastery over bodies and outcomes, pragmatic solutions.

Give them: Wounds that cannot be healed cleanly. Fallout that can be redirected. Lives saved at horrific cost.

Leverage: Corruption through exposure. Authority through unsanctioned methods. Show them how effective cruelty can be, and how visible it is.

Repentia

Wants: Punishment, redemption through action, visible sacrifice.

Give them: Opportunities to take the worst risks. Enemies worthy of dying for. Quests that demand escalation.

Leverage: Authority oversight, Corruption through excess, Fallout that becomes fuel. Let their suffering count for something, and make that terrifying.

Reliquant-at-Arms

Wants: Wonder, dread, sacred power, being the axis around which faith turns.

Give them: Relics that demand protection. Miracles that destabilize the situation. Crowds that look to them for certainty.

Leverage: Faith stress, Authority scrutiny, the weight of relics that should not be where they are. Make belief move the world.

Dialogous

Wants: Influence through words, knowledge as weapon, sanctioned manipulation.

Give them: Secrets that decide wars. Translations that change doctrine. Moments where a sentence matters more than a bolter.

Leverage: Corruption via interpretation, Authority via overreach, Bonds that become liabilities. Let their words shape reality and show them the price.

Dominion

Wants: Momentum, decisive violence, objectives completed cleanly and fast.

Give them: Targets that matter. Structures begging to be broken. Moments of tactical brilliance. Chains of command that collapse if struck right.

Leverage: Operational pressure. Resource scarcity. Let them cheat the Operation stress economy — but leave wreckage behind that someone must answer for.

Running Missions without scripted adventures

Battle Sisters missions are not stories with planned endings, but more like mandates issued with insufficient intelligence, executed under impossible conditions, and judged only after the damage is done. The Sisters will be sent to achieve a singular goal, and friction comes from the fact it is never, ever going to be that simple.

Use the following tools to generate Havens, Landmarks, Adversaries, and Complications that respond to player action rather than dictate it. Roll when you need inspiration, choose when you want control.

Define the Mandate

Every Mission begins with a single, actionable objective. Keep it concrete.

Examples:

- Retrieve a named relic before it can be moved
- Locate and destroy a rogue psyker
- Identify and execute the leader of a religious schism
- Purge compromised clergy in a specific jurisdiction

- Destroy or purify a corrupted shrine or reliquary
- Break a cult before its final rite is completed

The Mission ends when the mandate is fulfilled, or it becomes impossible to complete.

HAVEN CREATION

A Haven is a place where the Sisters can breathe — briefly. It should always be:

- Useful
- Politically charged
- Home to competing interests and factions
- Already under strain
- Full of secrets and lies

Next you'll find a series of tables to help you create your own Haven by picking from the listed options or rolling for random results.

WHAT KIND OF HAVEN IS THIS? (D12)

A Haven can be anything. This table could have 100 entries. This table could have one thousand entries for all anyone knows. The Imperium is vast.

1. Pilgrim district attached to a major shrine
2. Convent-fortress or Sororitas mission house
3. Cathedral precinct under partial lockdown
4. Ecclesiarchal administratum complex
5. Orbital shrine-platform or chapel-voidstation
6. Frontier monastery overseeing multiple settlements
7. Shrine-city manufactorum quarter
8. Ecclesiarchy-controlled agri-hold
9. Military chapel embedded in a PDF stronghold
10. Missionary hospice or charity enclave
11. Recently reconsecrated site after violence or disaster
12. A Voidship cathedral repurposed as habitation and place of worship

WHY IS IT STILL STANDING? (D12)

If the Sisters are here it's because the planet is in peril, and therefore its Havens, cities, population centers, fortresses, etc are teetering on the brink, except for the one thing that keeps them going.

1. Houses a widely venerated shrine or sainted site
2. Controls food, water, or pilgrim flow
3. Maintains a vital vox or astropathic relay
4. Protected by political necessity
5. Backed by a powerful off-world patron
6. Fear of what would happen if it fell
7. The population is still loyal, for now
8. No one agrees who has authority to shut it down
9. Its failure would expose past sins
10. It is officially "under investigation"
11. It is too useful to destroy yet
12. The truth has not reached the right ears

BONDS PRESENT (Roll twice. D12)

Each Bond must have status and leverage. They all have a reason they can't simply ignore the Sisters, and there probably is a reason the Sisters can't ignore them either.

1. Senior priest or cardinal
2. Abbess or prioress with limited autonomy
3. Planetary official or governor tied to the Ecclesiarchy
4. PDF commander sworn to the Ministorum
5. Rogue Trader factor or Cold Trader intermediary
6. Confessor attached to military or civil authority
7. Cult leader operating behind orthodoxy
8. Noble patron of shrines and pilgrimages
9. Administratum scribe who controls records
10. Missionary who has gone too far
11. Sanctioned psyker attached to religious rites
12. Inquisitorial observer keeping their distance

IMMEDIATE PROBLEM (D12)

1. Conflicting sermons fracture the faithful
2. Unsanctioned rites gain popularity
3. Supplies vanish
4. Public accusations of heresy circulate
5. A Bond prepares to flee or defect
6. A miracle is proclaimed without approval
7. Violent purges are being planned
8. The population shelters someone condemned
9. Records have been altered or erased
10. A rival authority asserts control
11. Armed forces begin choosing sides
12. The Sisters' presence becomes politicised

If the problem is ignored, escalate narratively:

- A Bond is compromised, killed, or defects
- The adversary gains legitimacy or cover
- Critical information disappears
- The Sisters are blamed for what follows
- The Haven turns into a warzone

LANDMARK CREATION

Landmarks are flashpoints, places of violence and faith and decisive action. They matter because something there is indelibly linked to the Sisters' mission. It's probably where danger is most immediate, and where most dice rolls take place.

WHAT IS THIS PLACE? (D12)

1. Major shrine or pilgrimage site
2. Cathedral complex or basilica
3. Ecclesiarchal archive or scriptorium
4. Missionary training ground
5. Manufactory producing devotional goods
6. Astropathic chapel or sanctioned psychic site
7. Shrine-adjacent hab district
8. Former battlefield turned place of worship
9. Ecclesiarchy-controlled transit hub
10. Frontier chapel overseeing void or warp routes
11. Subterranean refuge sanctified during past crises
12. Public square used for sermons and judgments

WHY DO THE SISTERS COME HERE? (D12)

Usually the reason to visit a Landmark will be obvious from the fiction, but if you need a little more sauce, here's a short, vague-ish list.

Some Landmarks will be immediately adjacent to Havens—same place, just more dangerous, more independent from the Imperium's grasp. Other Landmarks will be remote wastes, moons, craters and ruins.

1. Target operates openly here
2. Evidence of corruption originates here
3. Authority here legitimises the enemy
4. A ritual requires this location
5. This place controls information flow
6. A false miracle occurred here
7. Someone important is hiding among the faithful
8. A Bond directs them here
9. Removing this place will break resistance
10. The site anchors popular belief
11. This is where judgment must be seen
12. The mandate demands public action

WHAT HAS GONE HORRIBLY WRONG? (D12)

1. A public sermon openly contradicts Imperial doctrine, preached to a crowd that listens in rapt silence.
2. Punishment has replaced pastoral care. Cages, floggings, and executions are performed as daily ritual.
3. A living individual is openly venerated as a saint, their words treated as divine instruction.
4. Rival authorities issue contradictory orders, each backed by armed followers bearing the Aquila.
5. A sanctioned rite produces unnatural effects, light bends, statues weep, prayers echo back incorrectly.
6. A relic inflicts pain or madness on the faithful who touch it, yet they refuse to stop venerating it.
7. Confession is used as a tool of control, names recorded, sins catalogued, absolution denied.
8. Violence is justified as mercy, with executions framed as acts of spiritual salvation.
9. Prayer has ceased entirely, replaced by fearful silence or compulsory gestures devoid of faith.
10. The population obeys without belief, terrified of punishment rather than devoted to the Emperor.
11. Non-human influence is evident in worship, through symbols, visions, or even strange tongues that do not belong.
12. Authority is openly mocked or ignored, and the faithful assume judgment will never come.

IF THE SISTERS DO NOTHING (D12)

If the Sisters delay, retreat, or choose to ignore the problem, this is what happens next.

1. A daemonic presence manifests openly, fed by corrupted prayer and ritualised devotion.
2. A powerful psyker reveals themselves, seizing control of the faithful through miracles or terror.
3. A xenos force strikes the Landmark, exploiting the collapse of spiritual and military discipline.
4. The population erupts into riots and purges, neighbour turning on neighbour in holy violence.
5. A senior Imperial authority is assassinated, shattering the last remnants of order.
6. Two armed factions clash in the open, each claiming righteous cause, neither willing to yield.
7. A false saint declares a holy war, drawing thousands into a doomed crusade.
8. A mass ritual completes, permanently tainting the site and everything bound to it.
9. The faithful abandon the Emperor entirely, turning to despair, self-destruction, or darker powers.
10. A Warp storm or psychic phenomenon isolates the region, cutting it off from aid or retreat.
11. The cult reveals itself openly, no longer hiding behind scripture or obedience.
12. The Imperium responds with overwhelming force, and the Sisters are blamed for failing to act sooner.

ADVERSARY CREATION

Enemies are rarely obvious monsters. Most wear Imperial faces. Sisters delight in a simple enemy but the universe is rarely so generous.

THE ADVERSARY'S IDENTITY (D12)

1. Chaos cult (Tzeentch-influenced)
2. Chaos cult (Nurgle-influenced)
3. Chaos cult (Slaanesh-influenced)
4. Genestealer cult embedded in local faith
5. Rogue psyker or astropath
6. Compromised Ecclesiarchy officials
7. PDF schism with religious justification
8. False saint or prophet
9. Heretical missionary movement
10. Xenos manipulators posing as allies
11. Imperial faction exploiting heresy
12. Something officially "already dealt with"

WHAT MAKES THEM DANGEROUS? (D12)

You will normally roll on this table if the adversary is somehow embedded into Imperial society or has infiltrated, but it can work for more openly hostile foes, such as Xenos.

1. Legitimate authority
2. Popular devotion
3. Control of doctrine
4. Advanced, destructive weaponry
5. Economic leverage
6. Control of information
7. Apparent miracles
8. Political protection
9. Fanatical followers
10. Ability to disappear or go to ground
11. Controlling something the Sisters need
12. The truth being inconvenient

HOW DO THEY RESIST? (D12)

Open violence is easy, immediate, uncomplicated and can be responded to in kind. Other forms of impeding the Sisters are more insidious and might require a more deft hand.

1. Open violence
2. Bureaucratic obstruction
3. Traps, ambushes and deceit
4. Turning allies against the Sisters
5. Martyrdom and spectacle
6. Retreat and delay
7. Warp distortion, Heretical power
8. Appealing to higher authority
9. Mass manipulation
10. Sacrificial escalation
11. Framing the Sisters as heretics
12. Forcing a public choice.

COMPLICATION TABLES BY OBJECTIVE

RETRIEVE A RELIC

- The relic is in active use
- Removing it will collapse local faith
- Multiple factions want it
- It resists removal
- It has already been copied
- It is needed to stop something worse

DESTROY A ROGUE PSYKER/ASTROPATH

- They are protected by the faithful
- They believe they are saving lives
- Killing them will blind the system
- Someone else is already hunting them
- They are a conduit, not the source
- They are sanctioned — barely

CRUSH A CULT OR SCHISM

- The cult is doctrinally persuasive
- The leadership is orthodox on paper
- The cult has military backing
- The cult exposes real Imperial crimes
- Purging it will cause mass unrest
- The cult has already “won”

PURGE COMPROMISED CLERGY

- Evidence is circumstantial
- The clergy are beloved
- Higher authority intervenes
- The purge creates martyrs
- The corruption is systemic
- One of the accused is innocent

APPENDIX

IMPERIAL SITUATION ORACLE

The state of an Imperial or at least friendly settlement, outpost, hive-sector, shrine, frontier town, or voidship compartment.

- 1–2 Outsiders (mutants, pilgrims, refugees) violently rejected
- 3–4 A dangerous, proscribed discovery is made
- 5–6 Ill omens or ecclesiastic prophecies trouble the locals
- 7–8 Natural disaster reshapes the area (quake, collapse, storm)
- 9–10 Old grudges reignite between factions or families
- 11–12 A sacred relic or critical item is lost
- 13–14 Someone important is taken by unknown forces
- 15–16 A strange warp-light or unsanctioned “miracle” occurs
- 17–18 A leadership revolt or schism brews
- 19–20 An exiled outcast returns seeking vengeance
- 21–22 Rival Imperial faction threatens or sabotages the settlement
- 23–24 The planet’s fauna/eco-system lashes out violently
- 25–26 A key figure vanishes without trace
- 27–28 Industry or resource production halts suddenly
- 29–30 A string of ritual or symbolic murders
- 31–32 Debts—financial, feudal, or spiritual—come due
- 33–34 Leadership becomes tyrannical or unjust
- 35–36 A catastrophic industrial or voidship accident
- 37–38 Cult infiltration revealed among respected citizens

- 39–40 Raiders/Brigands prey freely on the weak
- 41–42 The settlement’s founding myths are exposed as cursed or fraudulent
- 43–44 An innocent (or nearly innocent) is accused of heresy
- 45–46 The community shows signs of warp-taint or psychic corruption
- 47–48 Weather or void conditions isolate the area
- 49–50 Supply shortage verging on famine
- 51–52 Plague, mutation-sickness, or uncontrolled spread of disease
- 53–54 Allies turn hostile under mysterious influence
- 55–56 An attack is imminent—everyone knows it, but not from where
- 57–58 A pilgrim caravan or merchant fleet is lost
- 59–60 A dark secret about local leadership surfaces
- 61–62 Urgent expedition must depart immediately
- 63–64 A leader dies or is assassinated
- 65–66 Feuding families, gangs, sects, or regiments erupt in conflict
- 67–68 Administratum or Arbites display catastrophic incompetence
- 69–70 Leadership pursues reckless warmongering
- 71–72 A monstrous beast or escaped mutation hunts the area
- 73–74 Someone close to the Sisters betrays the mission
- 75–76 A diplomatic truce or oath is broken
- 77–78 A vengeful ghost, saint-spirit, or warp-haunt manifests
- 79–80 Conflict with the Planetary Defense Force, Enforcers, or PDF
- 81–82 Vital trade route or tunnel is blocked or sabotaged
- 83–84 Civilians caught in crossfire of a larger conflict
- 85–86 A newcomer or infiltrator sows discord
- 87–88 A major event (pilgrimage, festival, rite) is threatened
- 89–90 A dangerous rite, tradition, or oath must be performed
- 91–00 Roll twice and combine (if contradictory, the Warp is to blame)

CHAOS/WARP INTRUSION ORACLE

For when you need things to get proper weird.

- 1-2 A Sister hears a voice promising a truth she desperately wants
- 3-4 Warp-light flickers across weapons and relics
- 5-6 Local wildlife becomes unnervingly intelligent
- 7-8 A Sister dreams something that comes true within minutes
- 9-10 An object begins leaking faint, iridescent fluid
- 11-12 Someone's shadow moves independently
- 13-14 A bystander begins chanting in a language no one knows
- 15-16 A Sister's Faith Stress spikes without cause
- 17-18 Time skips and is lost - a missing second, a blink-out
- 19-20 A child or weak-souled NPC briefly levitates
- 21-22 Two Sisters see different versions of the same moment
- 23-24 A servo-skull malfunctions, reciting true prophecy
- 25-26 Mutations appear then vanish on corpses
- 27-28 A warp gust extinguishes all flame
- 29-30 Pain echoes through the squad with no wound
- 31-32 A sigil appears scorched on a wall where none was
- 33-34 Someone nearby develops temporary psychic ability
- 35-36 A psyker experiences uncontrolled discharge
- 37-38 Blood pools in unnatural patterns
- 39-40 A Sister's vox picks up prayers in her own voice
- 41-42 The sky or void briefly gazes back
- 43-44 A relic becomes unbearably heavy or unbearably light
- 45-46 An NPC's memories rewrite themselves
- 47-48 The ground feels soft, pulsing

- 49-50 A Sister's armor weeps oil or tears
- 51-52 A dead enemy speaks a warning
- 53-54 A distant explosion occurs, but no cause is found
- 55-56 Birds or vermin freeze in place, staring
- 57-58 A Sister sees a vision of her own failure
- 59-60 Something circles overhead, unseen
- 61-62 A Sister's weapon whispers
- 63-64 A minor daemon attempts a brief possession
- 65-66 A friendly NPC confesses heresy they never committed
- 67-68 A Sister's skin develops glowing script for moments
- 69-70 A Warp rift flickers open for a heartbeat
- 71-72 An entire room or hall becomes impossibly cold
- 73-74 A mirror or visor shows a different face
- 75-76 A faint hymn is heard but the tune is wrong
- 77-78 Gravity fluctuates
- 79-80 A significant item corrupts or melts
- 81-82 A Sister sees a long-dead comrade
- 83-84 A psychic shockwave hits the area
- 85-86 An enemy mutates mid-battle
- 87-88 An Omen of Chaos manifests: flies, frost, fire
- 89-90 A daemon fully manifests (GM chooses severity)
- 91-00 Roll twice and combine for a catastrophic, chaotic Warp intrusion

PLOT TWIST ORACLE

For mid-operation turns, revelations, reversals. Roll on this whenever things are going a little too smoothly.

- 1–5 The threat was a distraction; the real danger is elsewhere
- 6–10 A heretical truth or hidden history is revealed
- 11–15 The Sisters walk into a carefully prepared trap
- 16–20 A foundational assumption proves completely false
- 21–25 A secret alliance emerges
- 26–30 The squad's actions inadvertently advance an enemy plan
- 31–35 Someone thought dead returns
- 36–40 A stronger or more terrible foe reveals itself
- 41–45 The Sisters and their enemy momentarily share a goal
- 46–50 Someone's true identity or allegiance is exposed
- 51–55 A trusted figure betrays the Mission
- 56–60 The squad arrives too late to stop a catastrophe
- 61–65 The true enemy reveals itself
- 66–70 The enemy gains new, horrific allies
- 71–75 A new danger appears—environmental, political, or warp-born
- 76–80 Someone important goes missing
- 81–85 A hidden relationship is revealed
- 86–90 Two unrelated plotlines suddenly interlock
- 91–95 Unforeseen abilities, powers, or mutations manifest
- 96–00 Roll twice; both occur

SAMPLE ADVERSARIES

Adversaries in the 41st millennium are too varied to list and stat out. Below you'll find a few sample adversaries for the Sisters to shoot at. You can either slot them in directly into your game, or use them as a template — make a xenos enemy, any monstrous creature you want, whatever. Make up your own equipment tags too, such as a tag for the Necrons' Gauss weaponry. "Balance" is an extremely tertiary concern.

MINOR ADVERSARY — CULT SKIRMISHER

A knife, a stolen gun, and a mouth full of heresy.

Stress Die: D4

Resistance: 6

Protection: 0

Domains: Heresy, Frontier

Weapons / Threats:

Improvised Blade (D4): Close, Tiring

Stolen Autogun (D4): Ranged, Loud, Unreliable

STANDARD ADVERSARY — PDF SQUAD LEADER

Uniform intact. Faith compromised. Follows orders too closely, too fervently.

Stress Die: D6

Resistance: 10

Protection: 1

Domains: Imperium, Warzone

Weapons / Threats:

Lascarbine (D6): Ranged

Shock Baton (D6): Close

TOUGH ADVERSARY — HERETEK PREACHER

Probing mechadendrites, binharic hymns that fill your mind with visions of Chaos, and a very, very big weapon.

Stress Die: D8

Resistance: 14

Protection: 1

Domains: Tech, Heresy

Weapons / Threats:

Warp-laced Binharic Sermon (D6): Ranged

Omniassiah's Warped Staff (D8): Close, Brutal

MOB ADVERSARY — FANATICAL MOB

A hundred voices shouting a hundred heresies together. Extremely dangerous to ignore, morally costly to annihilate.

Stress Die: D6

Resistance: 12

Protection: 0

Domains: Imperium, Heresy

Weapons / Threats:

Crush of Bodies (D6): Close, Spread

Thrown Objects & Firebrands (D6): Ranged, Volatile

Special: when the mob takes Stress, describe individuals breaking, fleeing, or turning on one another. At half Resistance, reduce the Stress Die size to D4.

ONE HUNDRED NAMES FOR ONE HUNDRED SISTERS

- | | | | |
|---------------|-----------------|-----------------|----------------|
| 1. Aelia | 29. Naomi | 57. Octaviana | 79. Verena |
| 2. Socorro | 30. Rebekah | 58. Flaminia | 80. Dorothea |
| 3. Livia | 31. Theodora | 59. Thalela | 81. Calpurnia |
| 4. Octavia | 32. Agatha | 60. Keziah | 82. Lauria |
| 5. Flavia | 33. Pelagia | 61. Tirzah | 83. Decima |
| 6. Cassia | 34. Euphemia | 62. Maura | 84. Justina |
| 7. Valeria | 35. Scholastica | 63. Ione | 85. Albina |
| 8. Sabina | 36. Callista | 64. Eliana | 86. Vespera |
| 9. Cornelia | 37. Eudoxia | 65. Liora | 87. Luceria |
| 10. Amparo | 38. Soledad | 66. Abigail | 88. Honesta |
| 11. Helena | 39. Isidora | 67. Rhoda | 89. Sabatha |
| 12. Priscilla | 40. Veronica | 68. Silvana | 90. Aurex |
| 13. Lucilla | 41. Laurentina | 69. Cassiana | 91. Serapha |
| 14. Antonia | 42. Quintilla | 70. Penthesilea | 92. Candela |
| 15. Serena | 43. Rufina | 71. Paulina | 93. Ordina |
| 16. Claudia | 44. Sabella | 72. Faustilla | 94. Fidelia |
| 17. Faustina | 45. Tertulla | 73. Valentina | 95. Vigilantia |
| 18. Aurelia | 46. Liviana | 74. Aemilia | 96. Clarion |
| 19. Minerva | 47. Maxima | 75. Hespera | 97. Litanía |
| 20. Domitilla | 48. Honoria | 76. Galatia | 98. Praxa |
| 21. Benedetta | 49. Prisca | 77. Junia | 99. Bellatrix |
| 22. Magdalena | 50. Aureliana | 78. Petronilla | 100. Hyppolita |
| 23. Esther | 51. Petra | | |
| 24. Miriam | 52. Constantia | | |
| 25. Deborah | 53. Juliana | | |
| 26. Salome | 54. Lucentia | | |
| 27. Judith | 55. Marcina | | |
| 28. Hannah | 56. Severina | | |

This is an unofficial, fan-made tabletop roleplaying game.

Warhammer 40,000, Warhammer, Games Workshop, and all associated names, logos, factions, characters, locations, and imagery are trademarks and/or copyrights of Games Workshop Limited.

This work is not affiliated with, endorsed, sponsored, or approved by Games Workshop. No challenge to Games Workshop's intellectual property is intended.

This project is provided free of charge and is intended for personal, non-commercial use only.

Find more of my work at:

<https://hipolita.itch.io/>

<https://soulmuppet-store.co.uk/products/cantrip>

<https://plusoneexp.com/products/rad-by-hipolita>